

ROOSEVELT ASSURES AID TO DROUGHT AREAS

Representatives From Southern States Confer With F. D. R. on Needs in Section.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—President Roosevelt today assured a congressional delegation representing Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina that he would give "early and serious consideration" to their request for maximum soil conservation and resettlement relief to the end that unprecedented drought conditions in the south-east might be immediately alleviated.

Headed by Representative Paul Brown, of Elberton, Ga., and Representative Fulmer, of Orangeburg, S. C., the delegation called at the White House at noon today where they had a half hour conference with the chief executive who listened to their plea for aid with earnest attention. Other members of the group were Representatives Carl Vinson and B. Frank Welch, of Georgia, and Representative Starnes, of Gunterville, Ala.

As spokesman for the delegation, Mr. Brown said, after the group had emerged from the President's private office, that the conference was "most satisfactory" and he felt confident Mr. Roosevelt had a true picture of the seriousness of drought conditions in Georgia and other states of the south-east.

Ask Available Funds.

"We asked the President," declared Representative Brown, "that he request Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Undersecretary Tugwell to utilize all resources available, including funds from the soil conservation act, to give relief to farmers in the drought area, based on the percentage of damage to individual growers and not on an average of county or state losses."

"We made this request because many farmers have their crops up, with others facing from a 75 per cent loss to complete failure."

"We urged Mr. Roosevelt to call upon Dr. Tugwell to utilize the $85,000,000 allotted to his administration under the deficiency bill, just signed by the President, to make loans and grants to our now-desperate farmers."

"In order to insure all the relief possible, we further asked the chief executive to set aside rules and regulations governing the resettlement administration that they could be liberalized to an extent that they could be made to render assistance to others than destitute farmers because all farmers in the drought-infected area need this assistance to buy seed for feed and food crops."

To Liberalize Rules.

"President Roosevelt also was requested to instruct the WPA to liberalize their rules in connection with employment so as to permit farmers in the drought-stricken areas to enlist for work on relief projects.

All three delegations members from Georgia—Representatives Brown, Vinson and Welch, agreed that President Roosevelt received their plea in a "true humanitarian spirit," and that there could be no doubt but what he would ask his subordinates to render immediate and effective relief.

Sacrificing an opportunity to witness the opening of the democratic national convention in Philadelphia today, the three Georgia representatives remained in Washington to seek every aid possible for the drought-harassed farmers of their congressional districts.

"Franklin Delano Roosevelt will be renominated without our help," said Representative Welch, "but I reckoned it was better to remain here on the job if we wanted to make sure he thoroughly understood the sad plight of our cotton farmers."

20,000 Roosevelt Backers Expected In Saturday Rally at Ball Park

Jere A. Wells, co-chairman of the fifth district Roosevelt nominators, yesterday laid plans for a great mobilization of democrats beginning at 7 o'clock Saturday night at Ponce de Leon ball park, and announced that 20,000 will be present.

A meeting of all workers for the entire district was called for 4 o'clock Friday afternoon at the city hall, where a general round-up of activities will be reported.

Confident that the district will exceed its quota in the state campaign to raise $100,000 to aid the national democratic committee in its drive to assure the re-election of President Roosevelt, Wells yesterday was busy visiting various governmental units and interesting attaches in the campaign for the $20,000 set as the minimum from this district.

Many Tickets Placed.

More than 3,000 tickets to the mobilization of district democrats were placed yesterday in city and county departments, and today the first results of the preliminary drive will be made known.

City workers gathered late yesterday afternoon and Wells, Charles H. Cox, marshal of the United States court, and others spoke. Several members of city council also were present. About 1,500 tickets have been assigned to city workers.

At 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, county employees will attend a gathering in the court room of Judge Jesse M. Wood, and it is expected that a report on the number of sales made from the 1,500 tickets placed in the county will be inspiring.

Marion "Over Top."

Charles J. Bloch, vice chairman of the Georgia Roosevelt nominators, announced last night that telegraphic aid to him were that Marion county already had reached its quota.

The $20,000 assigned as the quota of the fifth district is being raised through sales of tickets to the mobilization, at which Mr. Roosevelt's speech accepting the nomination as the party's candidate for the presidency will be heard over radio hook-ups. Tickets are being sold at $1 each.

There will be simultaneous mobilizations of democrats throughout the nation, and it is expected that 100,000 will be present at Philadelphia field from which the President's acceptance will be broadcast.

100 Per Cent Expected.

George I. Simons, chairman of the city hall committee, expressed confidence yesterday that city workers will have subscribed 100 per cent.

So confident was Wells that he already was laying plans for a two-hour entertainment program at the park Saturday night before Mr. Roosevelt's speech begins at 9 o'clock.

Tubby Walton will represent "special privilege, big business and the republican party" in a fist encounter with Frank Darnell, well known in sport circles for his small stature, according to plans.

Darnell will represent the democratic party and the New Deal. Under the schedule Darnell is supposed to emerge a victor, but Walton's enemies were putting out a story that there may be a double cross. Wells, however, said he had Walton under perfect control and that as Walton is known universally as a staunch and loyal democrat, he would sell out and let Darnell have the decision.

Firemen to Play.

The firemen's band will furnish music, it was announced by J. A.

(Gus) Harper, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, in charge of that portion of the program.

In addition, two good amateur baseball nines, will battle it out under the direction of Trammell Scott.

Wells yesterday invited all federal employees who wish to join in the nominators drive and purchase tickets to do so at 816 Henry Grady hotel, state headquarters. Civil service rules prevent a solicitation of federal employees, but they can join voluntarily.

Ticket Depots Listed.

The following places were listed at which the tickets for the mobilization can be obtained:

Seventh Ward—Clyatt's Drug Store, 1521 Gordon street, S. W.; Marler and Rivers Barber Shop, 1529 Gordon street, S. W.; Stegars Drug Store, Cascade and Beecher; Medlock Pharmacy, Lee and Gordon; Rivers Barber Shop, Lee and Gordon; Marler's Barber Shop, Cascade and Gordon; Watson's Barber Shop, Cascade and Beecher.

WPA HEAD TO MAP STATE'S PROGRAM

Miss Shepperson Will Announce New Work Plans After New Orleans

Works progress administrators of the south will gather in New Orleans next week to map programs for the WPA fiscal year beginning July 1.

Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state administrator for Georgia, will leave this week-end for New Orleans and will return to Atlanta later next week with an announcement of how Georgia will benefit by the $15,000,000 allotment made to this state under the new apportionment of work-relief funds approved by congress.

Work that has been started will be completed, Miss Shepperson said yesterday, as she discussed plans that are being shaped for the new WPA year in Georgia. Miss Shepperson also said that she was confident that the percentage of employment would remain at about the present level. What new jobs will be started, Miss Shepperson does not know and will not be able to announce until she has returned from New Orleans.

SON EXONERATED IN FATHER'S DEATH

William Malpass Acted in Self-Defense Against Parent, Court Finds.

Charges were dismissed in recorder's court yesterday against William Malpass, of 183 Georgia avenue, who was held in connection with the death last Thursday night of his father, Thomas J. Malpass.

The elder Malpass suffered a fractured skull in falling during an alleged argument in front of their home. Malpass testified his father advanced upon him with a knife, and that he struck in self-defense.

"It is regrettable and was unintentional," he told Recorder A. W. Callaway. "I had no intention of injuring my father, but was only defending myself."

The argument was over the father's desire that the son turn over bonus money to him, it was revealed at the hearing.

ADMITS FOREST FIRE.
McCORMICK, S. C. June 23.—(AP) Mrs. Lena Turnage, charged with setting a forest fire, pleaded in circuit court here that she started the blaze to drive snakes away from near her home. Judge C. J. Ramage, of Saluda, sentenced her to six months or a $150 fine, but suspended sentence.

LOWER GASOLINE TAX OBJECTIVE OF GROUP

A reduction of the state gasoline tax to 3 cents a gallon and a repeal of federal taxes on gasoline, oils, motor vehicles and accessories, will be the chief objectives of the state petroleum industries committee, according to a statement issued yesterday by that body.

The committee, the statement sets forth, opposes "drastic or unnecessary" federal regulation of interstate motor vehicle operations, and all efforts to divert state gasoline tax revenues from road construction purposes.

MORE THAN 800,000 NEW 1936 CHEVROLETS have been sold

America is giving overwhelming preference to Chevrolet because it's
The only complete low-priced car

MORE than 800,000 new 1936 Chevrolets have been built and sold—more than four-fifths of a million since announcement day—the largest volume of business that Chevrolet has enjoyed in any comparable period in its entire history.

Record-breaking sales always indicate record-breaking value, and that is why we are printing these figures. They are important, not because they establish a record, but because they carry the following message to all people who have yet to buy their 1936 cars.

America is choosing Chevrolet because America is convinced that Chevrolet represents the most motor car for the least money.

"The most motor car," because it's the only low-priced car with such vitally important features as New Perfected Hydraulic Brakes and Solid Steel one-piece Turret Top for greatest safety; Improved Gliding Knee-Action Ride; Shockproof Steering and Genuine Fisher No Draft Ventilation for greatest comfort; and a powerful High-Compression Valve-in-Head Engine for the most efficient all-round performance.

And "the least money," because Chevrolet's low purchase price, low operating costs and low maintenance costs make it the most economical of all cars to own.

America is saying these splendid things about Chevrolet with actual buying orders! Follow America's judgment. Place your order for a new 1936 Chevrolet—the only complete low-priced car!

TOM LINDER TO SEEK RE-ELECTION TO POST

Commissioner of Agriculture Announces Candidacy; Is High in Talmadge Counsel

Tom Linder, commissioner of agriculture, yesterday announced his candidacy for re-election on his record.

When Governor Talmadge ran for commissioner of agriculture, Linder was one of his lieutenants and for a time served as director of the State Bureau of Markets. When Talmadge was elected governor, Linder became his executive secretary and served until he resigned to run for the agricultural post.

Text of Linder's announcement follows:

"I went out and made a fight to try to get reasonable prices for the farmers and finally succeeded in getting a reduction in prices of from $2 to $3 per ton. When the supreme court declared the NRA unconstitutional fertilizer prices immediately came back to normal.

"As commissioner of agriculture, I have not hesitated to call the attention of those in authority to the needs of the Georgia farmers; to inequalities and discriminations against the Georgia farmers, and to ask that these discriminations and inequalities be corrected.

"When the legislature met in 1935, a bill was passed authorizing the commissioner of agriculture to establish some farmers' markets. The legislature, however, did not make any appropriation for this purpose. Without any special appropriation, I went to work to build a system of farmers' markets in Georgia and we now have a system working parallel in the United States. On the Atlanta market alone, we are selling more than one-half million dollars of vegetables and truck crops for the farmers each month.

"The regular routine work of the department of agriculture has been carried on. In 1935, inspectors of the department drew 13,200 samples of fertilizers, of which 350 were found subject to penalty for non-compliance with the law. On each of these penalties, settlement has been made with the farmer by the manufacturer.

"Realizing that it is impossible for farmers to grow truck and vegetable crops profitably without reasonable transportation cost, I have urged truckers to come into Georgia from other states and buy produce, truck and farm produce and take it away to other states where more people have to buy their food.

"This has worked wonderfully well and I expect to continue my effort to encourage the development of farmers' markets and the operation of trucks on paved highways to move the farmers' crops to the centers of population of the north and east.

"I am announcing my candidacy for re-election to the office of commissioner of agriculture subject to the democratic primary to be held September 9, 1936, and I will appreciate not only your vote but your active support."

FOUR LIVES ARE LOST IN 2-DAY CRASH SERIES

identification was made through a telephone number of a friend of both men, found in Davis' pocket.

"When the legislators met in 1935, a bill was passed authorizing the commissioner of agriculture to establish some farmers' markets. The legislature, however, did not make any appropriation for this purpose. Without any special appropriation, I went to work to build a system of farmers' markets in Georgia and we now have a system working parallel in the United States. On the Atlanta market alone, we are selling more than one-half million dollars of vegetables and truck crops for the farmers each month.

"The men, dead in overall, were going to work. They were employed as well-drillers on an estate in Lake Worth Heights, police said. Skid marks found near the scene indicated the driver of the car attempted to apply the brakes, but too late.

The train was southbound for Florida, and proceeded after a slight delay.

Davis is survived by his wife, a young daughter, Caroline Ann; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Davis, all of Palmetto; five brothers and five sisters.

Crash Occurred Monday. The crash in which Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Jamerson were fatally injured occurred at about 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon during a cloudburst which made the highway extremely slippery.

With Mrs. Jamerson at the wheel, the train was returning to this city from a vacation trip to Macon when a heavy express train, driven by Charles S. Hall, 22, of Covington, Ky., skidded into the car. It is believed the Jamerson vehicle also skidded slightly.

Impact demolished the passenger car, and the two injured women were taken to Grady hospital in an ambulance from McDonough. Hall accompanied them to the hospital.

Suffered Concussion. Mrs. Payne suffered concussion of the brain, deep shock and a probable fractured skull. Mrs. Jamerson suffered a fractured right leg, left arm and lacerated face and head, losing much blood.

Owners of the vehicle are the S. W. Bumpus Highway Express Company, of Newport, Ky.

Mrs. Payne, who was 68 years old and lived at 620 South McDonough avenue, Decatur, is survived by a son, H. H. Payne; a daughter, Miss Mary Belle Payne; two sisters, Mrs. C. B. Andrews and Mrs. I. H. Casten, and five grandchildren, all of this city.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Brandon-Bond & Condon.

Hall, who was prostrated after the accident, was arraigned yesterday morning on a charge of reckless driving before Justice of the Peace G. S. Hunt, at McDonough, Henry county seat, and dismissed.

Sheriff L. D. Hightower, of Henry county, where the crash occurred, said he would not be arrested unless a warrant were sworn for that procedure.

Edgar S. Duffee, 36, of McDonough, was reported as "Mia" at Grady hospital. He was injured Monday night when he was struck by an automobile while leading a horse on Ashby street, near Jefferson.

Contrast to the crossing tragedy was revealed when it was reported to police that a car driven by R. S. Kimbrell, of 373 Edgewood avenue, struck a box car on tracks of the Georgia Railroad at DeKalb avenue and Hurt street, with no injury to the driver and slight damage to the vehicle, at about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

the War Department today to Charles M. Bawel, an Atlanta brother of Lindsay M. Bawel, army flier drowned with his three children at sea.

The adjutant general regrets to report that a message received from the army transport Chateau Thierry en route to New York reports that your brother, Lieutenant Bawel, died on the high seas June 22 by going overboard together with his three children. It was not learned whether the bodies have been recovered.

Lieutenant Bawel's wife, Helen F. Bawel, is on the transport which is due to arrive in Brooklyn on June 26.

WASHED OVERBOARD. OBSERVERS BELIEVE. A telegram last night from army officials to the aviator's family in Atlanta stated reports from the transport led investigators to believe that the Bawels were washed overboard in a tropical storm.

Charles Bawel, Atlanta brother of the flier, said the telegram also stated none of the bodies had been recovered. Army officials said they would notify the Atlanta family of any additional news from the transport.

The flier was a former student of Tech High school and the Georgia Tech aviation school. While at Tech High he was a star football player, winning a scholarship to Vanderbilt University but was kept from attending the Tennessee school by an injury suffered in an athletic contest his last year in high school, according to his brother.

Since entering the flying corps, his advancement had been rapid. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1928, made a first lieutenant in 1934, and in March, 1935, was promoted to a captain.

His widow formerly was Helen Fallon, of Flushing, L. I. In addition to her, his brother, Charles, and his mother, Mrs. E. E. Bawel, of 223 Pence street, St. Louis, Mo., are survived by another brother, E. Bawel, of Birmingham, and a sister, Mrs. Asa Beach, of San Antonio, Texas.

NONE OF BODIES RECOVERED YET. NORFOLK, Va., June 23.—None of the bodies of Captain Lindsay M. Bawel and his three children, lost from the army transport Chateau Thierry, have been recovered, according to a radio message from the Chateau Thierry to the coast guard station at Key West, Fla., picked up by Norfolk coast guard headquarters early today.

The Key West station made an effort to learn details of the tragedy, but as far as was known here, was unsuccessful.

A message from the Key West station to the transport read: "Hard work recovered any bodies?" The Chateau Thierry replied: "None of bodies recovered."

ton committee "will not be bogged down by the state committee action of this state, it is unfair and undemocratic for any group or individual to attempt to usurp their powers in their own community."

"Therefore, Be It Resolved, That the Fulton county democratic executive committee ignore this undemocratic action of selfish and scheming politicians to feather their nest with sums of money not required for any election machinery, but for the purpose of holding an election machinery."

"That the Fulton county democratic executive committee, whose members are elected by the people, will not be intimidated by the people of this county and are their representatives in the democratic party of this state, it is unfair and undemocratic for any group or individual to attempt to usurp their powers in their own community."

"That the attention of the state committee is called to what happened in DeKalb county in the last election when the state committee required the county committee of that county to decide and do matters contrary to the wishes of the citizens of that county."

"That the Fulton county democratic executive committee hereby authorizes and empowers its finance and rules committees to adopt and put in force reasonable entrance fees for all candidates for offices in Fulton county, and that the rules committee require said candidates to post the said fees fixed with the county committee by a certain date set by the rules committee, otherwise their names be left off the ballot in September."

"That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the chairman of the state committee, and if they do not like the action of the Fulton county committee, let them pay to the county committee the expenses of holding a primary election in Fulton county, which they collect money from."

"That the chairman of the state committee answer this resolution and inform the Fulton county committee where all the money that the state committee is collecting is going to be spent and what for, since they do not hold any elections in the various counties."

"That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the newspapers of this county, so that the people can be informed of this attempt to usurp the election machinery of this county for political purposes."

Hewitt Chambers, secretary of the Fulton county, read statistics showing that the local committee probably will run a deficit of about $2,000 in holding the local primary. It was suggested that banks will be asked to lend the committee sufficient funds to hold the primary, but the resolution offered by Hartley, demands that the state committee provide sufficient funds or leave from the local tickets the names of state officers.

Judge Parker said his committee will meet today to redraft the Hartley resolution.

Whispers of Dissension Are Heard As Platform Makers Push Labors

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.

A foggy silence, penetrated by thin whispers of dissension, tonight moved ahead of the first session of a democratic platform committee generously laden with New Deal advocates.

A serenely smiling White House spokesman—Senator Wagner, of New York—walked with sparse words through the convention scene. He declined to be brought from Washington a presidentially-inspired platform draft to be perfunctorily approved here. He was unperturbed by suggestions a platform fight was possible.

Wagner came to town in the still dark early hours. He went to a hotel on a quiet street. But he was out early to begin a series of private talks with Secretary Wallace, Governor Lehman, of New York; Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, and Chairman Farley, of the national committee.

Later he announced he would call together tomorrow morning the committee whose membership includes 16 United States senators, two governors, a sprinkling of government officials—at least a score of men who have fought the New Deal battles.

Initial talks. The initial task of the resolutions committee will be that of hearing the proposals of widely scattered groups. Policy advocates. Among those asking to be heard are farm, labor, peace, pension, civil liberties and women's groups. These heard, Wagner said the committee would get down to the serious business of piecing the platform structure together.

That business had already been begun informally. In a downtown hotel route, platform makers, two governors, and other men, were not to be disregarded, but these signers of a letter urging 1936 delegates to abstain from Roosevelt gave way this time to cabinet members and leaders in the new campaign machinery.

Even the platform talk had changed. Delegation was in the air at Chicago in 1932; praise and justification bulked large here.

Today's platform talk was primarily of methods. Delegates and committee members asked each other, not which way to go but how best to proceed on a charted course. They asked how best to manage the currency, how best to destroy monopoly, how to aid farmers by preserving soil fertility, preventing floods, enlarging markets, paying debts, insuring crops, controlling production.

Secretary Hull told Tennessee delegates he understood reciprocal trade treaties would be mentioned in the platform.

Senator Barkley replied to a tariff suggestion by Alabama delegates: "I don't think there will be any general tariff legislation proposed."

Sound Dollar Plan. Dr. Jay M. Schaffer, chairman of the notable group, had been informed that the monetary plank would declare "for a sound dollar and no mention of gold or silver except as a means of exchange."

Everyone this morning knows who Senator Barkley is. Everyone heard him as he sounded the principles and policies of the democratic party from the stage of the Philadelphia city auditorium last night.

A rock-ribbed democrat of the first rank, he always chooses to sound the keynote address at a democratic convention and Senator Barkley was selected this year as the foremost orator and champion of democratic policies.

Student at Emory. Forty years ago, Senator Barkley was a 19-year-old student at Emory University, a classmate of such distinguished alumni as Emory, of the late Dr. Charles E. Downman; W. M. Ward, well-known Atlanta businessman; George R. Gibbons, vice president of the Aluminum Company of America; Henry Heine, Atlanta capitalist; Vaughn Nixon, Atlanta manufacturer, and Judge Jesse M. Wood, of the city court of Atlanta.

Senator Barkley entered Emory in 1896 and remained until the end of the spring term in 1898. While at the college he became a member of the Delta Delta Delta fraternity.

He returned to his home state of Kentucky and entered Marvyn University, where he received his A. B. degree in 1900. He then attended the University of Virginia law school.

Career in Kentucky. After being admitted to the Kentucky bar, Senator Barkley started his career as a county prosecutor. Later he was elected to the house of representatives and after a few terms in that body was elevated to the United States senate.

Senator Barkley during the last 40 years has retained a close connection with Georgia. He has returned here a number of times to deliver the principal address at Atlanta's Jackson Day dinner in the Ansley hotel.

His last visit here was in 1934, at the time of the state-wide rally of democrats in October, 1932, he stated he felt very much attached to Georgia because of the debt of gratitude he owed Georgia, having received his education from Emory University and many of his ideals from General John B. Gordon and Bishop Warren Chandler, two men who helped in shaping his career.

Another link in a new route from Atlanta to Tennessee is provided in the form of 5.34 miles of paving in Carroll county on the Fairmount-Chattahoochee road. The job is near Cartersville. It is a state project.

Route Completion. A hard-surfaced route between Tate and Dardaville is to be completed with paving of 6.41 miles—a state job. A bridge and two culverts are called for in Brooks county, improving the route from Quitman to Monticello, Fla., with federal funds.

A long fight staged by Savannah for completion of the Pipe Makers Canal route on the route to Augusta will see successful conclusion. A contract for .765 mile of paving in Chatham county was called.

The longest stretch of work—20,439 miles of resurfacing—was asked in Pickens and Gilmer counties on the Jasper-Bellamy road. It is a state job.

let of pickets and that he and Police-William Hook and Charles Burston went to the plant to act as an escort.

He said he found a dealer on the tracks and informed Adam Johns, chief of the company guards, who was riding on the locomotive. The engine, tender and its one car were run down to the obstacle and Johns got down to try to remove it.

A fusillade of rifle fire broke out from behind buildings, empty box cars and embankments. Johns, with bullets clipping his clothing, scrambled back into the engine's cab and the fire was returned. No strikers were wounded.

Inside the wire mill were about 200 maintenance workers, who have been hand-picked for food since a Postoffice Department order a fortnight ago prevented movement of supplies to them in postal trucks.

The walkout, affecting 5,500 workers, was called by the amalgamated union to enforce demands for collective bargaining rights, which the union contended were denied in defiance of a national labor relations board ruling.

Broker Dies of Stroke

LOUIS B. HUFFAKER, 52, BROKER, PASSES AWAY

Grant & Company Executive, Native of Rome, Suffered Stroke.

Louis B. Huffaker, associate of Grant & Company, Atlanta brokerage house, died yesterday at his residence, 1101 Rosedale drive, N. E., at the age of 52. Mr. Huffaker had been in apparent good health until he suffered a stroke Saturday night. Death occurred at noon yesterday.

A native of Georgia, Mr. Huffaker was reared at Rome. He had been one of the best known market operators and brokerage experts in the southeast for 25 years.

At the time of his death he was chief brokerage executive of Grant & Company, and prior to that time he had been associated with Fanner & Beane, John F. Clark and Stein Brothers & Boyce.

He served as resident manager of several of the nation's leading brokerage houses for 15 years at Miami and Palm Beach, and was one of the pioneer brokerage men at the Florida resorts.

He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Miss Sara Anna Huffaker; three sisters, Mrs. J. H. Blackstock, Mrs. J. F. Welch, of Shaker Heights, Ohio, and Mrs. Helen Rogers, and two brothers, Frank L. Huffaker, Daytona Beach, and Kenneth M. Huffaker, associated with The Atlanta Journal. Funeral services will be in charge of H. M. Patterson & Son.

GEORGIA DRY STATE, U. S. OFFICIAL SAYS. No Wholesale Permits To Be Granted, Giving Government Power.

The burning question of the hour in Georgia, under regulation of the federal government, considered a dry state—was believed answered last night with the statement that so far as issuance of wholesale liquor permits is concerned Georgia is a dry state.

Which seems to settle the case, despite reports to the contrary. Retail liquor permits are necessary to sell wine and beer as well as whisky and no classification is made.

The wholesale permit weapon, however, and the ruling now made on the issuance of these permits definitely puts Georgia in the dry state classification, and brings the federal government into the field, since regulations require retail sale through wholesale liquor holders. The ruling was made by H. C. Flanery, deputy administrator in charge of permits.

ACWORTH TO DEDICATE
MODERN SCHOOL PLANTMiss Shepperson To Attend
Exercises Friday Opening Building.

By CHES ABERNATHY JR.
MARIETTA, Ga., June 23.—Miss Gay B. Shepperson, head of federal relief activities in Georgia, will pay her first visit to Cobb county Friday to dedicate a large, new school building at Acworth, it was announced today by Mayor Carl Butler, of that city. Residents of Marietta and Cobb county will attend the dedication ceremonies at 8 o'clock Atlanta time, and Mayor T. M. Brumby, of Marietta, will be one of the speakers. Besides the school building, Acworth has completed a number of other important civic improvements under its present city administration.

The school building, an eight-room, one-story brick building, cost $40,000. It is equipped with a large auditorium. When completed this week it will probably be the most modern school structure in Cobb. Added to the present two-story building which has been in use for a number of years, it will give adequate educational facilities for the city and a large surrounding territory. A gymnasium, tennis courts, a large football field and also a baseball diamond and outdoor basketball courts give the school splendid recreational and athletic opportunities. Many of these added projects were done through WPA cooperation with city officials.

Two years ago T. C. Branson Jr., WPA engineer, and Mayor Carl Butler, of Acworth, mapped out a program of civic development for the city. Every project listed in this program will have been completed when the finishing touches are put on the school building.

On the school building the city voted $5,000 in bonds, the school board contributed $1,000 in cash, about $7,000 was utilized from a legacy left by the will of H. H. Lemon, public-spirited Acworth resident, and the balance of the cost was met by WPA labor and materials.

The dedication will be a county-wide occasion in spite of the fact that the Acworth schools are an independent system. WPA officials expected to attend, besides Miss Shepperson, are R. L. McDougall, state engineer, of Atlanta; T. C. Branson, R. E. Williams, Lamar Parham, C. B. Trammell, T. J. Scott, Mary C. Wathen, J. E. Hood and G. D. Barrett. Members of the Cobb Board of Education and other courthouse officials have also been issued invitations.

Members of the city Board of Education at Acworth are: Lemon A. W. Trevett, chairman; E. L. Collins, R. M. Clark, J. H. Harrison, J. P. McCune, Dr. R. G. Reed, D. H. Kemp. Members of the city council are: Orlando A. W. Jr., Frank C. Mills, D. Collins, W. L. Evans and J. H. Robertson.

Other recent improvements in the city, through WPA aid, consist of three miles of paved sidewalk and a new city jail and council building, costing about $5,000. Acworth is 12 miles north of Marietta, on the Dixie highway, and is in the center of a prosperous farming region. It is one of Cobb's oldest and most historic cities.

E. E. COX INDORSED
IN SECOND DISTRICT

S. Marvin Griffin, of Bainbridge, Qualifies in Congress Race.

MOULTRIE, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—Unanimous indorsement of the national administration and the record of Judge E. E. Cox in congress, was voted here today by the second congressional district democratic executive committee in a brief business session over which Henry Grady Bell, of Bainbridge, presided.

Judge Cox was unable to attend the meeting because of a call to the national democratic convention in Philadelphia.
Twelve o'clock, noon, of July 4 was set as the date for closing of entries in the second district congressional race and each candidate is required to post a $200 bond. Candidates must qualify with D. R. Bryan, of Bainbridge.

By vote of the committee, September 10 was selected as the date for meeting in Cairo to consolidate the vote.

Immediately following the business session, approximately 35 members, representing 12 of the 14 counties in the second district were guests at a luncheon. Mitchell and Tift counties were the only ones not represented.

GRIFFIN PAYS FEE
IN SECOND DISTRICT

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., June 23.—S. Marvin Griffin, who has announced his candidacy for congress from the second district, paid his entrance fee today to D. R. Bryan, secretary of the congressional democratic executive committee of this district.

Griffin is opposing E. E. Cox, incumbent, of Camilla, for the congressional post.

HANDBILLS BARRED
Augusta Council Restricts Distribution.

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—An ordinance restricting distribution of advertising handbills passed city council last night and will become law when published three times.

The measure, intended to prevent cluttering of streets with discarded handbills, makes it unlawful for advertisers to place on automobiles or placards or for handbills to be placed on residence porches or premises.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS
DISCUSSED AT MACON

MACON, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—Problems of municipal government to be presented for general consideration of the Georgia Municipal Association at its meeting in Atlanta July 16-17, were discussed here today by mayors and government officials in the sixth congressional district. The all-day session was held in a local hotel.

During the morning most of the time was devoted to a discussion of the proposed 15 mills tax limitation amendment which was presented by S. A. Nunn, Perry, favoring the proposed amendment, and by Orville A. Park, Macon, who spoke against the amendment.

W. S. Dennis, district director of the WPA in Georgia, spoke this afternoon.

WEED FARMERS STUDY
PROBLEMS AT TIFTON

State, Federal Experts Discuss Tobacco Growing at Experiment Station.

TIFTON, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—South Georgia farmers who turned to tobacco growing to hike farm income met here today for a first-hand study of new production and disease-control methods developed by scientists.

The occasion was the annual tobacco farmers' fair at the Coastal Plains experiment station. State and federal experts co-operated in presenting the day's program, and the experiments on which the various addresses and round table discussions were based.

A report that "good crops of tobacco are usually obtained after a crop of weeds" was presented by E. C. Westbrook, cotton and tobacco specialist of the state agricultural extension service.

Westbrook said recent investigations showed that some weeds cause more damage from disease than others, and "the weed question is being looked into very carefully."

Nitrate Aid Crop.

The specialist said whereas tobacco growers once thought use of nitrate of soda would injure tobacco, experiments showed it to be "one of the most profitable sources of nitrogen."

He said experts working out methods of control for diseases attacking tobacco plants had learned that "it tobacco is grown after such crops as peanuts, oats or corn, less damage will occur from root knot than if grown after cowpeas, cotton or sweet potatoes."

S. H. Starr, director of the experiment station; J. M. Carr and J. C. Gaines, other experts at the station, were among speakers who discussed various tobacco experiments.

Tomorrow and Thursday, tobacco specialists, agronomists and pathologists from the United States Department of Agriculture, and from the states of Virginia, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and North Carolina will re-examine tobacco experiments and formulate recommendations for 1937.

This meeting will be executive. It will be the first time the blue-cured tobacco committee has held its annual meeting in Georgia.

SPIRITUAL AWAKENING URGED BY AINSWORTH

MACON, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, said today the United States needs the spiritual arousing of its people more than an overhauling of its government.

"The hope of this country is not in any political party," he said. "Neither the triumph of one nor the defeat of the other will usher in the millennium."

The bishop opened the second annual adult assembly of the South Georgia conference here.

"Hope of a 'new society,'" he said, "lies in an awakened church."

"It is to be feared that many modern churches are just living on appearances. Their spiritual capital is exhausted and they are nothing but an echo of their former lives. Many of them are dead and do not know it."

GIFTS ARE PRESENTED TO JUDGE BARRETT

WAYCROSS, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—United States Judge William H. Barrett at the opening of federal court here yesterday was presented with a handsome display of flowers by the Waycross park and tree commission and with a gavel by the Waycross bar.

The presentations were made by John W. Bennett Sr. In response, Judge Barrett said the occasion was particularly significant inasmuch as he was appointed to the federal bench exactly 25 years ago.

The judge referred to his becoming 70 years of age and eligible for retirement in September and said it was his purpose not to remain on the bench any longer than he deemed himself constructively effective.

MERCER SEEKS BIDS
ON $55,000 LIBRARY

MACON, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—Dr. Spright Dowell, president of Mercer University, announced today that bids will be sought at once for the construction of a library to cost when furnished approximately $55,000.

The library was made possible by a gift of $45,000 from the general board of education, and a gift of $10,000 by former Governor L. G. Hardman.

Dr. Dowell said that work would begin at quickly as possible.

GEORGIA POSTMASTERS
WILL MEET AT ALBANY

ALBANY, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—The Georgia branch of the National League of District Postmasters will formally open its annual convention here tomorrow.

Mrs. L. Bertie Rushing, of Greenville, president, will present her report at the opening session with talks also to be made by John F. Bradley, Atlanta, railway mail superintendent; Paul L. Miles, of Metter; John E. Jones, of Lula, and others.

BODY OF DROWNED BOY
FOUND IN ROME RIVER

ROME, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—A searching party found the body of James Dougherty, 12, in the Etowah river today.

The youth drowned yesterday while in swimming with five other boys, Clarence Fowler, who attempted to rescue Dougherty, narrowly escaped drowning, and a five-year-old boy, James Adams, was pulled from the water by R. B. Lively, attracted to the scene by screams of the youth.

Rain last night halted search for Dougherty's body.

DORRANCE BROWN, 30, DIES OF DIVE INJURIES

Dorrance Brown, son of Major General and Mrs. Preston Brown, and a native of Atlanta, died at Lakewood, N. J., last Sunday, of injuries suffered when he dived from a boat into a shallow part of Barnegat Bay, near Toms river.

Brown, who was 30, married Miss Jane A. Evans, of Boston Heights, Canal Zone, in a brilliant wedding three years ago. The couple were widely known by members of Atlanta society. He was related to several prominent Atlanta families.

General Brown, his father, and Mrs. Brown were flown in an army plane from Boston to the bedside of their son and arrived before he died. The general was in command of the sixth corps area, at Chicago, when he was retired in 1934.

FATHER OF ATLANTAN PASSES IN VIRGINIA

J. E. Drewry, father of Mrs. Louis P. Jerry, wife of a prominent Atlanta insurance man, died Friday at his residence in Capron, Va., after a short illness.

Mr. Drewry, who was 77, was a member of one of the oldest Virginia families.

CATTLE CLUB TO MEET.
TRION, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—The Georgia Guernsey Cattle Club will hold its annual field day here August 11. The visitors will be guests of Ringdale farms here.

LEARNING TO SWIM.
ROME, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—A 50-year-old woman joined the annual year-to-swim class here, which has a total enrollment of 280. Daily classes will be held for two weeks under direction of a Red Cross instructor with eight assistants.

ATHENS EXPECTS BIG CROWD.
ATHENS, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—With four state conventions of the American Legion, the Legion Auxiliary, the Society of 40 and 8 and the Sons of the Legion, due to open here Thursday, indications were today that several thousand visitors will be present for the sessions.

According to the Legion housing committee, the advance reservations for accommodations have already passed the 1,000 mark and was nearing the 1,200 mark this afternoon.

HOUSING LOANS.
LAFAYETTE, Ga., June 23.—Earl Cooke, state director for the national emergency council, has announced that through April 30 the federal housing administration had insured 145 modernization loans amounting to $51,227.24, and had accepted nine mortgages for insurance amounting to $31,000 through March 31 in Walker county, making a total for the county of $102,227.24.

CANNERY REOPENS.
LAFAYETTE, Ga., June 23.—The members of the Future Farmers of America Club of the LaFayette High school have reopened their cannery with the newly added equipment. They are now prepared to do canning for the community and surrounding territory. J. F. Cobb is faculty adviser for the enterprise.

RAIN IN WALKER.
LAFAYETTE, Ga., June 23.—Heavy rains fell over Walker county yesterday afternoon, bringing relief to the crops, which were wilting under the intense heat of the past two weeks.

Courtesy of C. W. Wheeler is urged the farmers to plant an abundance of summer feed crops in order to help with the winter feed. Practically all of the earlier feed crops are a failure on account of the protracted drought.

METHODIST MEET.

FORSYTH, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—The Griffin district Methodist conference was held here today. Among the speakers were Rev. Lester Rumble, presiding elder of the Atlanta district; Dr. W. A. Shelton, pastor of the Griffin Methodist church; and Dr. W. T. Hunnicutt, pastor of the Martha Brown Memorial church, Atlanta.

EX-GEORGIAN DIES.
EATONTON, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—Eatonton residents learned of the death of Mrs. Maude Stubbs, who lived here a number of years, in Fort Myers, Fla. Mrs. Stubbs was the mother of Judge Roy D. Stubbs, of Fort Myers.

PETITION DENIED.
SUMMERVILLE, Ga., June 23.—The Chatham county democratic executive committee, at a called meeting, after reading the petition of Sheriff T. A. Cook, who alleged that one of the rules of the state executive committee had been ignored and that a second primary, or runoff primary, should be held in the race between Sheriff Cook and Robert C. Lee, refused to allow the runoff election, it being stated that the rules of the state committee include no such rule and that a second primary would be illegal.

Kelley was nominated for sheriff off over Cook, who declares that his opponent did not receive a majority of the votes cast in the county primary for sheriff, there having been five candidates in the race.

MRS. J. E. CLOWER
DIES AT HOSPITAL

Pioneer Atlanta Woman Was Prominent in Church, Civic Work.

Mrs. John Edmund Clower, widow of the late J. E. Clower, pioneer Atlanta resident, died yesterday at a private hospital. She was one of the oldest members of St. Luke's Episcopal church and was a prominent church and civic worker.

Mrs. Clower served for many years as corresponding secretary of the Pioneer Society; she was chairman of mission work for the Episcopal diocese of Atlanta; an active member of the Ladies' Memorial Association and the Daughters of the King.

She was a daughter of Frederick William Flynn and Mrs. Eliza Berry Flynn, natives of Ireland and pioneer residents of Columbus, Ga.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Robert M. Cobb Sr.; a nephew, Robert Cobb Jr., and a niece, Miss Ella Lee Cobb.

Funeral services will be in charge of H. M. Patterson & Son.

CHURCH 'HOUSE PARTY' IS BASIS FOR PROGRAM

Sixty members of the First Baptist church, who last week attended the religious 'house party' at Rome, will present a special program at the prayer meeting service to be held in the church tonight.

Accompanied by Dr. Ellis A. Fuller, pastor, many leaders in the Atlanta church spent five days last week at Shorter College, where they participated in religious and recreational programs. Dr. Fuller declared the house party was a complete success and steps would be taken to make it an annual affair.

Those in charge of tonight's service are Mrs. Will Smith, Mrs. Lester Forbes and Elizabeth Jackson. The program will consist of brief talks and special music.

THREE GEORGIANS WIN
AIR CORPS PROMOTIONS

Three Georgians, members of the army air corps, have won promotion to the rank of lieutenant colonel, it was announced yesterday by fourth corps area headquarters.

Captain Frank O'Driscoll (Monk) Hunter, of Savannah, one of Georgia's aces during the World War, is one of the honored officers. He was credited officially with having shot down 11 German planes during his service overseas.

Major Charles Thomas Phillips, a former Georgia Tech student, and Captain Dashi McClain Reeves, one of two Georgians to receive similar promotions.

The promotions became effective June 16 and were the result of recently enacted legislation in congress, re-arranging the system of officer personnel in the air corps.

THREE NATIONS UNITE TO OPEN DARDANELLES

Russia, France and Rumania Move To Keep Curb on Germany.

MONTEUX, Switzerland, June 23.—(UP)—Russia, France and Rumania tonight formed a common front to keep the Dardanelles straits open to their fleets for the purpose of mutual assistance in case of war with Germany.

Joseph Paul-Boncour, French delegate, and M. C. Contresco, Rumanian spokesman, supported Russian Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff's demand that warships be allowed to pass through the straits freely to execute decisions of the League of Nations.

Turkey, at whose request a conference of nine European powers was called to discuss its demands for re-fortification of the Dardanelles, is seeking permission to control the passage of all warships through the straits so that at no time will there be more than 28,000 tons of foreign vessels in the Black sea. This limitation would exclude the Russian fleet.

In event the League named Germany the aggressor against any nation, France, under the Litvinoff plan, could send naval convoys into the Black sea to protect shipments of Russian and Rumanian wheat and oil to France, Russian troop movements and shipments of French munitions and munitions to Russia and Rumania.

Italy intends to oppose fortification of the straits when she joins the conference after the League has formally lifted sanctions, it was reported.

The question of unrestricted passage is declared certain to lead to renewal of the 200-year-old Anglo-Russian struggle, with Britain seeking the right to send strong naval forces into the Black sea and prohibiting Russia from sending her fleet into the Mediterranean. Russia seeks to maintain the Black sea and insists on the right to send vessels into the Mediterranean.

ATLANTANS RETURN

Mrs. H. C. Gould, Son Back From India.

After living several years in India, Mrs. H. C. Gould, of 969 Byron drive, S. W., and her 15-year-old son, Clifford, returned to Atlanta yesterday. The son admitted he was "delighted" to return here, but said he suspected he would have some difficulty adjusting himself to American customs. They were met at the train by Mrs. Gould's mother, Mrs. L. M. Green, and her brother, J. L. Green. The returning Atlantans is the daughter of the late Dr. Samuel H. Green, at one time county physician.

Her husband, manager of an automobile agency in Bombay for the last seven and a half years, will return to Atlanta in about a month to join his family. Mrs. Gould said she did not know how long they would be here, since her husband might be called to Bombay at any moment.

Young Gould, who was born here, said he "was very pleased to set foot on Atlanta soil." During his stay in Bombay, he attended an English private school.

MRS. FLORA E. PINSON
DIES ON VISIT HERE

Mrs. Flora E. Pinson, widow of the late Thomas Pinson, Atlanta newspaperman, died yesterday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. S. J. Deavours, at 604 Pryor street, S. W. She was 60.

Mrs. Pinson was visiting her daughter here when stricken ill. She resided at Smyrna and was an active member of the Smyrna Presbyterian church. She was a leading member of the Woman's Benefit Association, Smyrna charity organization.

In addition to her daughter, whom she was visiting, she is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. E. W. Brown and Mrs. Charles C. Jones, of Birmingham, and a sister, Mrs. Lizzie J. Jones, of Terre Haute, Ind.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Smyrna Presbyterian church, where the body will be taken by Harry G. Poole. The funeral will leave the Park chapel at 1:30 o'clock.

Burial will be in the Smyrna cemetery.

IN RIVER FOR BODY

Search was continued yesterday for the body of Clarence Poss, 22, of 878 Neal street, who apparently committed suicide, according to police, in the Chattahoochee river near the Bolton bridge early Monday morning.

Fulton county police dragged the river yesterday, but thus far have not recovered the body. According to police reports, Poss disappeared after leaving a note in which he said he intended to kill himself in the river.

Clothing identified as belonging to him was found about a mile from the bridge.

A MILITANT BATTLE CRY

The keynote address of Senator Barkley is at once a militant battle cry and a comprehensive statement of principles and achievements on which the democratic hosts can march on to another sweeping victory in the November elections.

Seldom has a political address as powerful in its attack, as convincing in its reply to criticism of democratic policies and as confident in tone been delivered from an American platform. It is not surprising that it aroused an overwhelming enthusiasm among the delegates to the convention that leaves no doubt of the united front that will be presented by the party in the approaching campaign.

The scathing denunciation of republican misrule, the frank and open discussion of New Deal policies and the reasons which brought them into existence, and the flaming spirit of confidence that mark Senator Barkley's address are in sharp contrast to the apologies, evasions and contradictions of the speakers who addressed the republican convention in Cleveland—efforts that resembled the walls of Jericho more than utterances of conviction and confidence.

Senator Barkley was quick to accept the challenge of the republican theme song of "three long years" of democratic administration, and his masterly depiction of the wreckage and ruin of the "twelve long years" of republican misrule, is a stinging rebuke, not only of the policies that brought about the downfall of the economic system of the nation, but of the party responsible for them.

No wonder, points out Senator Barkley, that utter collapse should follow such "long years" and that by—nineteen and twenty-nine the debacle of the Coolidge-Hoover reversion and the "twelve long years" of Hamiltonian exploitation were over. The dance was ended at last. The gaunt pines of bankruptcy, starvation and unemployment had come to claim their fee.

Following three years of republican impotency and incompetency in attempting to stem the ever-increasing flood of economic disaster, an outraged people swept the despoilers of their prosperity out of office and turned the administration of the government over to the democratic party.

Sensor Barkley reminds the country that when the new government began to function—

Faith returned. Confidence revived. National courage rose like the sun at dawn. Faces that for "three long years" had forgotten how to smile brightened up. Americanism returned to America.

The task of reconstruction was made doubly hard, the keynote points out, because "in this age of infinite complexity, of mutual dependence of community on community, state on state and nation on nation, all responsible governments must enlarge their field of activity and supervision to the end that the weak may be protected from the strong and rapacious and the approximation of justice among all classes may be secured."

blighting atmosphere of political and social antiquarianism made Jefferson—

the foremost as well as the most despised liberal of his generation; that drove Andrew Jackson along a course for which he was denounced as a vulgar ruffian; that inspired Abraham Lincoln toward a goal for which he was described as the earthly incarnation of coarse buffoonery, and that Woodrow Wilson was cynically pictured as a dreamy professor bent on political and social experimentation.

Both confidence and optimism are voiced by the keynote as, in indicating the broad basis upon which the democratic party will again go before the voters, he says: "As we survey the picture which the world presents and contemplate the four tragic years just prior to 1933, and the slow but steady progress of our country under this democratic administration, we are moved by a sense of profound gratitude that the nation today looks into the future with eyes that see within reach the goal of a happier and more abundant life for all our people."

In discussing the criticism that has been aimed at the New Deal as the result of the nullification by the supreme court of some of the acts of the Roosevelt administration, Senator Barkley points out that 67 acts of congress have been declared unconstitutional by the court, 21 of them being between 1920 and 1930, under republican administrations. These decisions, he emphasizes, did not strike terror into the hearts of the old guard and the old dealers . . . but when some three or four outstanding acts, conceived and consummated in behalf of labor, agriculture, and the honest conduct of business and designed to constitute this as a government of equal rights, are cast aside . . . we are asked to condemn the executive and legislative as attempting to inject some alien concept into the fiber of our institutions.

The object of the administration, the keynote address stresses, has been—

We have sought to serve the American people under the constitution. We have thought that under its broad and generous outlines we might rescue the people from national disaster. We have sought to treat it as a life-giving charter, rather than an object of curiosity on the shelf of a museum.

Senator Barkley cites that decisions of the supreme court were criticized by Presidents Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt and that Mr. Justice Stone in his dissenting opinion vigorously criticized the majority opinion.

The glaring contradictions of the republican platform, and its inconsistencies in comparison with the record of republican administration of the government and the attacks leveled by republican leaders on democratic policies, are strongly presented in the address.

There are no equivocations, evasions, dodging of facts or conflicting statements in the address of Senator Barkley, such as appeared in the various addresses delivered before the republican convention at Cleveland.

Rather, it is a ringing and spirited battle cry, in which the gauntlet thrown down by the republicans is joyously accepted; the record of democratic achievement is revealed in indisputable facts and figures; and the coming campaign is faced with a confidence born of the conviction that the nation will not discard its new and sound prosperity, the result of democratic policies, to return again to an era of republican misrule.

NO WASTED "SYMPATHIES"

Advancing the argument that the extent to which fascism and communism are at each other's throats forecasts that the next great war will be between Germany and Russia, the Review of Reviews has undertaken to conduct a referendum among its readers on the question as to which country would be backed by American sympathy in the event of such a war.

Just what purpose can be served by the referendum is somewhat of a mystery—but in a day of feeling the public pulse, such as this is, it is not surprising that there should crop out surveys of dubious value.

However, the Review of Reviews takes the position that the question of "where the sympathies of Americans will lie as they keep themselves out" of such a conflict is a matter of "more than academic interest."

As a matter of fact, it is probable that the average American would have little academic, or any other kind of interest in such a war. It is more probable that Uncle Sam, acting for all his nieces and nephews, would cross his fingers, close his eyes and turn his back on a row between two governments, the policies of which he so thoroughly opposes.

Both the Germans and the Russians are great and fine people, but their governmental experiments, and the unfortunate efforts of both at propaganda in America, have not been received with favor here.

If war comes between them, Uncle Sam can be depended upon to get unduly excited.

More important even than the formation of the first public opinion of the people's front government in France which will hold the center of the world's stage for months to come is the wave of strikes and coming from one end of the country to the other. Hardly subsided in the metal and armament industry of the capital and environs, where all the strikers' demands were granted, the movement spread to the textile centers of the north and east and now threatens to paralyze traffic in the ports and railways.

The character of those strikes is unusual because they are undertaken contrary to the wish of the leftist party, who do not want to see the new Blum government in any way. The syndicate leaders are also opposed to the strikes and seek to damp the movement. Nevertheless, the strikers' demands were granted, the movement spread to the textile centers of the north and east and now threatens to paralyze traffic in the ports and railways.

My impression is that the strikers are trying to force the Blum government to toe the line. A similar situation is arising in France as there is in Spain, where strikes are declared whenever something in the government's action does not tally with the program of the popular front. The current part of it is that the Blum government in France is in cahoots with the workers' syndicates and uses the strikes to intimidate and keep the workers in line. The strikers' demands were granted, the movement spread to the textile centers of the north and east and now threatens to paralyze traffic in the ports and railways.

World Congress Of Faiths

With the hope of promoting the spirit of fellowship among the peoples of the world a world congress of distinguished men and women of all religions from many lands will be held in London from July 3 to 18. The president will be the Maharajah Gaekwar of Baroda, who has shown great liberality to the large number of Moslems and Parsees among his subjects.

Sir Francis Younghusband, chairman of the British National Council, outlining the plans, said: "We are taking the congress seriously, believing it to be the greatest event in the world since the present time. We are trying to set a body of opinion that will form the spiritual basis of the new world order that everyone wants to see established. We have succeeded in getting together a body of speakers representative of all the great religions. Our object is not in any way to try to set up a new religion or to out that all religions are the same. We are intent on getting the representative of every religion to express what his religion would say about the objects of promoting world fellowship through religion."

Sir Abdul Qadir, member of the Council of India, who is to take part in the congress, recalled the fact that in the sixteenth century Akbar, the great ruler of India, collected around himself representatives of almost all the great religions and held great meetings where he asked those theologians to express each other's points of view. One of his objects was to bring about a spirit of fellowship, and India was then a very happy family.

Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

BERRY TIME.

It is always a joyous season when huckleberries and blackberries get ripe in Georgia, and I suppose equally so in other states. The drought almost left us without berries this year, but there are enough available to have a few pies and a few bowls with cream and sugar. Which raises a very interesting and important question, namely, which is the best way to eat berries?

As a boy on the farm I used to think the best way to eat berries was direct from the bushes as we would walk along home from school or to the woods to find the crows. Derived of the blessing of the crows along the lanes and through the swamps and woods, I have latterly come to associate berries with rolls, pies and bowls. Which of the three manners of eating them is preferable is not easy to say.

Cultivated berries have a certain advantage over the wild ones, namely, being larger and selling for fancier prices, but I suppose that most of us associate huckleberries and blackberries with the old-fashioned berry pie. I remember how we were always cautioned to watch our fingers when we were picking berries. And they didn't need to remind us of chiggers!

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

BEHIND SCENES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 23.—The delegates think this New Deal national fair is being run like Charlie Michaelson and the crowd of senators occupying the speakers' rostrum.

These men-on-the-scene are controlling factors in the mechanics of the convention, all right, but the political inspiration behind their important moves seems to be furnished by nobody except that even more famous political strategist, Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt himself.

This was hinted in the Barkley keynote. Senator Barkley wrote much of it in his own copyrighted Ciceronian style. But the two most important sentences are supposed to have flown directly from the presidential pen.

"What we need is a new definition and a new interpretation of interstate commerce. Every article that is grown or mined or fabricated in one state and destined for another, by whatever means of transportation, is an object of interstate commerce."

This is almost the same language employed by the President in his horse-and-buggy talk. The only things he left out were the horse and buggy and the idea that the way to attain this objective is through a constitutional amendment.

The inference behind Mr. Roosevelt's words as spoken by Barkley is that he is content to wait and change the definition by appointing new supreme court members as soon as adherents of the present definition die.

SARCASM

The unreconstructed rebel, Senator Glass, is only half reconstructed yet. He announced publicly upon his arrival here that he would not serve on the platform committee, but he did not say why. What he told his friends, in no whisper, and out of the side of his mouth, was: "I did not want to be on it, because the chairman is a socialist."

This is a harsh word for one democrat to use toward another, even off the record, but the Virginian apparently believes that Wagner's espousal of federal housing methods, social security and labor legislation entitle him to that classification. Wagner does not.

SYMBOLISM

Democratic arrangers are bearing down more heavily than usual on historic and religious themes. Obviously they are getting ready to match fervor with the Landonites on the two grounds. Bands in the streets seldom play "Happy Days," the old Roosevelt campaign song. They are trying to make "America" the theme song of the convention.

Synthetic figures played upon every side are the Liberty Bell and Thomas Jefferson. A big but bad profile of Jefferson casts one eye on the delegates from the most prominent position in the hall, a canvas just below the speakers' microphones. Every lamp post in the city carries the city flag with an imprint of the Liberty Bell. Nobody can turn around anywhere in town without seeing either Jefferson or the bell.

A trustworthy spiritualist is going to be required before the campaign is over to establish just who Jefferson is, with what Al Smith claiming him, Senator Glass saying he is the only Jeffersonian democrat left, and Senator Barkley definitely tying him up with Mr. Roosevelt.

CARD PULLING

Sensor Wagner's inside coat pocket bulged with papers when he naively told newsmen that he had no platform and did not know what all this talk was about.

The answer is, the New Deal fair promoters are getting a little upset about this meeting being called a cut-and-dried "one-man show."

The point is purely technical. All party rallies require close management. The idea that any platform committee could meet and compose principles within the time allotted by conventions is ridiculous. At the same time appearances must be preserved.

The essence of truth in Wagner's assertion is that he has several traits of some plank, all of which are acceptable to the President. He will hold these in his hand like cards, fanwise, before the platform committee and let the boys take their pick.

CONVENTIONALITIES

The special switchboard operator of the democratic national committee was brought from Washington to keep a private leased wire to the White House open and safe.

Three well-known republican scouts are here, seeing all. They had copies of the Barkley keynote as soon as anyone else did. Biggest and best scout is a private publicity agent who has a staff of subscouts.

A bunch of the boys from Georgia were whooping it up in a Broad street café, the other early morning, singing: "Glory, Glory to Old Georgia," but adding a kick-line: "We're All on the WPA."

Skilled money raisers who formed all these $1 Roosevelt organizations are talking seriously about investing in weather insurance for the outdoor notification ceremonies Saturday night.

The only competition to the democratic convention is that furnished by a New York committee who holds a rump socialist convention wherever he carries for a today.

The essence of truth in Wagner's assertion is that he has several traits of some plank, all of which are acceptable to the President. He will hold these in his hand like cards, fanwise, before the platform committee and let the boys take their pick.

The public utilities (New Deal spelling) also have scouts on the ground.

No one has mentioned the name of Professor Tugwell openly or covertly.

Personnel office politics is developing inside the controlling political office here. It grows out of conflicting personalities and disagreements over strategy, but probably will not become serious.

Is This The Truth?

Fair lady tells me not to eat watermelon before July 4.

Asked her why and she said it was an old southern custom. Melon eating, she said, is supposed to start on Independence Day and not before.

You had one of those oysters only in "R" months," she said.

"What's back of this? I never heard of it before. Did you?"

Anyway, saw a dozen people eating big slices of melon at lunch, yesterday. Evidently they hadn't heard of the rule, either.

And you're only to drive a mile or two to pass plenty of roadside signs, "Melons, ice cold, 10 cents a slice."

My interest, by the way, is entirely academic. Melons don't agree with me, in any event, and I can't eat 'em, either before or after the Fourth.

A Soprano Joins the Mourners.

From Clayton, Ga., comes a note from Ruth Reynolds Hendrix, confining a few paragraphs about the country's offering sales bargains in books to one who can't buy, hit her most tender spot.

"I've literally gone without cream, powder, rouge and silk hose to buy a book," she writes. "I'm a woman lay on the altar, any altar."

Listen, chile. In my humble opinion a woman who writes the sort of note you write, needs no cream, powder, rouge or silk hose to enhance her charms. Go without 'em and get your books. You're my kind of lovely lady, regardless of whether you're wearing no synthetic aids to beauty.

Was very dark and buxom. Just the sort of colored cook you'd picture in any old southern home of the better class. And she came to this office with woe written all over her features.

Said her little girl had run away from home. Described the child as 13 years old but tall for her age and slender. Light brown coloring and wearing white hat and waist and blue skirt.

Said the child was at home when she, the mother, went to work on Sunday morning. Gave her some coins for Sunday school collection and they were still on the mantelpiece when she returned in the afternoon. But the girl had gone and with her a suitcase and clothes. Neighbors said they saw the girl, carrying the suitcase, leave the house about 3 o'clock Sunday morning.

"Was she your own child?"

"No, she was adopted. But I'd had her ever since she was a mighty little tot and I wuz crazy bout her. She do hope nothin' had happen to her."

FAIR ENOUGH

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Once With Badges, Philadelphia Are Delegates.

23.—This is one of the noisy, color and excitement, this walling of motorcycle engines, and din of incoherent oratory beating on the nerves and emotions of the patriots, is actually the American method of selecting a ruler. These men and women, shoving and squirming through the hotel lobbies, leaning against the walls to ease their burning feet, these goggle-eyed, weary champion-chasers and autograph hunters with the badges on them and the trick hats and mottled sashes are the delegates. That raucous whoop from those unseen female with the voice of a Big Four engine, magnified a thousand times by the infernal ingenuity of the radio, is a patriotic song, inspiring the Americans to perform their solemn duty.

And that tall, bland, bald gentleman with the cud of chewing gum in his mouth, that is James A. Farley, of New York, who first felt the thrill of absolute power as chairman of the New York prizefight commission and now finds himself more powerful than he ever dreamed of being. It must take Mr. Farley's breath in his private moments to realize what a boss he has become.

As chairman of the prizefight commission he enjoyed the obedience of the knobby-knuckled fighters who always took off their caps in his presence and fawned upon him for their legal rights. It was his first experience as dictator and there is no doubting that he enjoyed it. He has since his own rules and broke them according to his pleasure or prejudice to punish an enemy or help a friend. He barred knuckleheads from the ringside as general policy but then issued licenses to some of the leading racketeers of the hoodlum era because it pleased his vanity to exercise the power of clemency. Under Mr. Farley's dictatorship, all rights depended on the whim. The will of the czar as we used to call him, and even his own rules were no guarantee because he governed strictly by ear.

Mr. Farley And Mr. Smith.

The wheel turns. It was Al Smith who appointed Mr. Farley to the prizefight commission and today Mr. Farley reads Mr. Smith out of the democratic party with a complete patronizing sneer about "certain people, prominent in organizations like the Liberty League."

Farley, with a fine record of public service, is a public enemy of the first degree. He is a gangster, in an offhand statement by a man who brings to national power the same kind of politics that he himself has used to the corners as seconds in a million-dollar fight in New York.

It may be that Mr. Smith has grown old, that he has fallen into the company and that his selfish interest in his personal fortune colored his judgment in denouncing the New Deal. And certainly he showed a pathetic loss of his old political knack in the tactless manner in which he addressed himself to the convention. Nevertheless, it comes as a bit of a shock that Mr. Farley can light-brown Al Smith as "people of the kind" and slur his "Americanism," then strike up the band and drown any thought of regret that might occur in a mass of delegates already hypnotized by noise.

Or perhaps Mr. Farley really is more "American" than Al Smith at the present moment. For this is a demonstration of the American system of selecting a president and Mr. Farley undoubtedly runs the show.

Never was a convention as loud and thoughtless as this one was even before the fall of the first session. One band quits and another breaks into sound with the crash of a railroad wreck. The loud-speakers enlarge the incredible din to a volume of deafening and hurl it from wall to wall of the downtown buildings.

A white man in flannels and straw hat, swinging a malacca stick, a band of Indian in a paint and chicken feathers around the corner of the Bellevue-Stratford and leads them whooping and squawking into the lobby. A party of some kind with a badge, it seems, is entitled to a motorcycle cop for an escort, and the piercing wail of the sirens is heard above the tumult. There are rushing to the photographers and rushing to the corners as seconds in a million-dollar fight in New York.

The Rules

1. The "GREAT NAMES" contest is open to every reader of The Atlanta Constitution being a bona fide resident of either the state of Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama or Florida, with the exception of employees of THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION and members of their families and with the further exception of any person who has won $1,000 or more in any previous newspaper contest.

NOTE: You do not need to be a regular subscriber, you may purchase The Atlanta Constitution each day at your newsstand.

2. Beginning Sunday, June 14, 1936, and continuing each day for 12 weeks, The Atlanta Constitution will publish a cartoon. Each cartoon will in some way suggest or represent a name. The name may be that of a person, city, state, nation, book, song or motion picture.

3. The Atlanta Constitution will award a First Prize of $4,000 as part of $8,000 in prizes to the person or persons submitting the best or most appropriate name to each of the 84 cartoons and in all other ways conforming to these Official Rules. The person or persons submitting the best or most appropriate names to all 84 cartoons and otherwise complying with these Official Rules shall be eligible for First Prize. The person or persons submitting the next nearest correct solution to the 84 cartoons and otherwise complying with all these Official Rules shall be eligible for additional prizes in the order of the correctness of their answers.

4. Neatness does not count. Do not decorate your answers. Just name the cartoons in accordance with the rules.

5. In case of ties, as many prizes will be reserved as there are persons tied before any prizes are awarded for a less correct solution; that is, if two or more persons tie in submitting the correct or nearest correct name to the 84 cartoons, the first two or more prizes will (without cost) to a second, and, if necessary, a third or fourth series of cartoons. In the event of final tie, a prize identical with that tied for will be awarded to each tying contestant.

6. To expedite filing, answers or solutions in this contest should be submitted as follows: At the end of each week, during which a series of seven cartoons will have been printed in The Atlanta Constitution, the contestant is requested to mail or bring the answers to the seven cartoons to the Great Names Editor, care of The Atlanta Constitution, in a unit. Solutions to this contest are to be submitted in a series, seven at a time. The answers to the cartoons printed during any week may be submitted during the following week.

7. In order to qualify for a prize, the contestant is required to accompany each of the 12 series of answers with a remittance of 10c in coin in payment for a special print of the week's featured cartoon, purchase of which is a condition for entering the contest. The Special Print, suitable for framing, will be mailed to the contestant in one set, at the close of the contest.

8. Any person upon entering the contest, and by the submission of answers, agrees to accept as final the decision of The Atlanta Constitution and the contest editor, on all matters affecting the conduct of the contest, the making of the awards, and procedure and policy, with regard to the acceptance of submissions during the contest.

9. Answer Form to which no names are signed will not be considered nor will any claims to the ownership to such answers be recognized. The Atlanta Constitution will not be responsible for answers or communications unduly delayed or lost in transit either from the contestant to The Atlanta Constitution or from The Atlanta Constitution to the contestant.

10. A contestant is permitted to submit as many sets of 84 solutions as he or she chooses, provided same are properly qualified, and each will be judged as a unit, but no person will be awarded more than one prize. When submitting additional sets of answers, all series must be identified as sets A, B, C, etc.

BARKLEY VS G. O. P. ACCUSATIONS AS SESSION OPENS

PROMISES TO CONTINUE POLICIES OF NEW DEAL

Will Conform to Supreme Court Rulings, But Thinks Change Needed.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—(AP) Following is the prepared address of Senator Barkley, Kentucky, Republican of the democratic national convention. The senator digressed often from his text, at times omitting several paragraphs and often changing words, but he stuck close to the basic theme of the text printed here.

We have assembled, as we have done for more than a century, to justify in government a liberalism designed to promote those primal and inalienable rights which weigh all political formalism and all conceptions of special privilege.

We are assembled here not merely to defend but to proclaim the New "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," to which Thomas Jefferson devoted his life and Franklin D. Roosevelt is consecrating every fiber of his immortal spirit.

HAS NO APOLOGY, REFUSES TO RETREAT

We meet in the fullness of national responsibility in all branches of the government, save one, with a record of performance never equaled in the history of the republic; and on that record we stand before the American people without apology and without retreat.

We meet to re-evaluate, to the highest of five within our gift, a man whose build-up in his record.

As we survey the picture which the world presents and contemplate the four tragic years just prior to 1933, and the slow but steady progress of our country under this democratic administration, we are moved by a sense of profound gratitude that the nation today looks into the future with eyes that see within reach the goal of a happier and more abundant life for all our people.

We come to this convention in the name of a democracy which is national in its historic background, in its approach to and willingness to deal in a national way with problems that are national in their scope.

WOULD NOT DEPRIVE STATES OF RIGHTS

We recognize the complexity of modern life. We cannot now do what we did in the past. We cannot now do what we did in the past. We cannot now do what we did in the past.

But we recognize the undeniable and self-evident fact that because of our growth in territory, population, wealth, the means of production, distribution and consumption and the facilities of transportation and communication, which have knit the American people into a nation, certain great vital questions affecting the daily lives of our people as a whole have been projected into our economic and social structure.

These vital questions cannot be stubbornly avoided or their solution long delayed by any political party or any administration which has an adequate sense of its responsibility to the people.

Political organizations are neither created nor justified merely as means of obtaining public office. Their justification lies in the fact that they are a means of expression and desire, as well as a focus of responsibility, in the administration of public affairs.

THOMAS JEFFERSON IS OFTEN MISREPRESENTED by those who pay to him the dubious homage of "Jeffersonianism," which is a term of abuse best given to the government is best given to the government.

From all the volumes which Jefferson wrote it is in vain to find a single sentence uttered concerning a single state of human perfection never yet attained. If that perfection were attained, it is a step to the doctrine that "government is best which governs not at all."

In this age of infinite complexity, of mutual dependence of community on community, state on state and nation on nation, all responsible government must be exercised in the end that the weak may be protected from the strong and rapacious and the approximation of justice among all classes may be secured.

CHANGING WORLD IN WHICH WE LIVE

Any political group, therefore, who, in the name of "Jeffersonianism," would lead the people to adjust unaided their lives and fortunes, and carve their individual paths through the uncharted waters of economic density, hides behind the sedentary indulgence of some ancient bubble, is unfit for high station or responsibility in the government of our day.

This is a moving, changing world in which we live. New generations, viewing the discarded shell of ancient theories, and the crumbling ruins of the fatal doctrine of fatalism, are asking why, among all the arts and sciences and achievements of man, only government is stagnant. And they are asking why, among all the arts and sciences and achievements of man, only government is stagnant.

It was this impatience with the blighting atmosphere of the political and social stagnation that made Jefferson the foremost, as well as the most despised liberal of his generation; that drove Andrew Jackson along a course of reform which he was denounced as a vulgar rascal; that inspired Abraham Lincoln toward a goal for which he was described as the earthly incarnation of course buffoonery; and that Woodrow Wilson was cynically pictured as a dreamy professor bent on political and social experiments.

FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT COMPANION IN SPIRIT Franklin Roosevelt finds himself in glorious company with the greatest spirits who have shaped the history of this nation.

He has not called with defeat but with the spirit of an untraveled warrior. He has sought to dedicate the powers of this government to the service of the people who support it with their substance and their blood. He has restored to them faith in it and control over it.

Why was it essential that the powers of government be exerted in a new way on the daily life of the American people? Why is it impossible to tread the same old paths, no matter where they lead? Why had there been a complete breakdown in nearly every branch of public and private endeavor?

Because for 12 years—yes, 12 "long" years—the ancient doctrine of special privilege had stood at the pilot's wheel on our ship of state. Because the powers of government had been exercised to promote the end of injustice and bring a palsy to the efforts of the people exerted in their own behalf.

Because the streams intended for the unretarded flow of the people's energies were choked and we found it necessary here and there to cut a new and straighter channel instead of trying to clean out an old and crooked one.

OLD DILEMMAS ARE DIAGNOSED

I find no relief in picking or pointing out ancient wounds. But in order to assess the wisdom of the remedies we have administered, let us diagnose the ailments from which we suffered.

They are of such recent existence that it ought not to be necessary to recount them. But my distinguished friend, the senator from Oregon, who was temporary chairman of the republican convention, forgot to mention them in his address.

And some of those who suffered and have been cured are now the most arrogant in their antagonism to the process which brought them through the crisis. Some of these who were rescued from drowning in the economic flood-waters let loose by the previous "long" years, now complain because in lifting them out we were forced to pull their hair.

When the present administration assumed office on March 4, 1933, all classes of society bore the marks of such a combination of maladies that it is only possible to mention them in the vaguest outline.

These maladies were not local. They were not set off by metas and bounds. They were not walled in by territorial barriers nor quarantined by yellow flags nailed to a shore.

They were maladies which took root deeply in the whole body of the social and economic fabric and were therefore chronic.

They have been fostered by enduring neglect, magnified by political folly, aggravated by venality and perpetuated by the frantic effort to cure them by their causes.

OUTLET IS NECESSARY FOR SURPLUS PRODUCTS

No nation can prosper long or truly which finds no outlet for the surplus products of its genius and labor.

But in four years—yes, "four long years"—under the guidance of the man who was applauded but not nominated at Cleveland, we saw our trade with the world decline from three billions to three billions dollars per year, setting the feet of three million men upon the streets and turning their faces toward the lengthening breadlines.

For 10 "long" years the condition of the American farmer had steadily declined in spite of the hectic flush of prosperity found on other portions of the economic body.

Each recurring season saw him compelled to accept for the products of his toil less than the cost of their production; saw his debts enlarged and his ability reduced; saw one-half the farms of the nation under mortgage and one-fifth of these on the verge of foreclosure; saw his foreign markets lost and his home market reduced; saw mounting and unsalable surpluses in all the basic products of the farm.

FARMER WAS LOSING EFFORTS OF LIFETIME

The farmer was losing not only his home, his toil, the rewards of his life and energy. He was losing his faith in his country's willingness of organized society through its only agency, government, to give him the same kind of break it had for generations given to others.

He was losing faith in political promises which had made him the victim of cynical indifference and devastating greed.

As if to pile on Peltan, the avenues of public and private credit were closed to him and the cry of the auctioneer was heard at every courthouse in the land.

In the realm of finance chaos greater than was ever seen in this or any other nation spread its shadow over the land. The nation's credit was in a state of collapse.

BANK FAILURES MADE WORLD-WIDE RECORD In the four years from 1928 to 1932 more banks had closed in failure than had closed in the same length of time in the same length of time.

The impact of the crash was so terrific and convulsive that through the terror men could not find the strength of their souls at the loss of their life's savings and their economic independence.

Industrial production had declined to 53 per cent of normal while industrial employment declined to 61 per cent. The purring wheels of production were at a standstill and the smokestacks were silhouetted against the heavens like monuments on a deserted battlefield.

And on the side of speculative excess, and by the false signals flashed from the doors of the treasury and the executive mansions, millions of men and women found themselves drawn into the vortex of worthless securities foisted on them by investment pirates. They saw their substance drawn from their hands as if by some unseen magic force.

UNLITHE BUSINESS, ILLEGITIMATE PROFITS The artificial and unethical methods of business competition obtained illegitimate profit regardless of merit and strangled smaller units of production and distribution.

Sweat, long hours, low wages, unwholesome working conditions and the physical and mental degradation of children remained the lot of millions of portions of American industry.

Unemployment rolls never dreamed of by the accumulated pessimism of the century, reached 15 and 16 million laborers in idleness.

Down went every economic index, while the savings of lifetimes ran along a course of ruin. Hour-glasses, and every month new thousands left the security of work under 15,000,000 workers tramped the streets in hopeless agony of effort.

Down we were hurled for "three long years," while confidence like a prodigious wave of the century, and the courage which had buoyed these barren shores in the days of the Puritan and under the pioneers had extinguished a continental wilderness began to faint on every hearthstone.

"LONG YEARS" FOUND CHARITY COLLAPSING The long years of republican superiority found local charity and relief everywhere collapsing, and millions of human beings were beggared by the breaking of banks and uncounted numbers of them found sleep only by the roadside, or upon park benches from which they were driven by the rising sun like dogs from a kennel.

Upon the crowded street corner the soap-box agitator found it not difficult to last in a fury that the disillusioned souls of men, who had not only lands and buildings and jobs and scraps of paper, but their faith in government, in society and justice and the spiritual foundations which sanctify the use and enjoyment of every earthly possession.

One sudden blast of wrath from outraged truth and decency and honor and pride and the tinsel tower of false dreams, false pride, false promises and false hope collapsed in its own ruin.

And what I ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who before the American Bankers' Association denounced the federal deposit insurance act which guaranteed the deposits of the people throughout the United States, and as governor of his state exerted every ounce of influence at his command to prevent the banks of Kansas from entering the guaranteed system?

What I now ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who met at Cleveland two weeks ago, and the ticket which he nominated, approved this ticket, and whether, if returned to power, they will scuttle it again as they scuttled the great system set up by the administration of Woodrow Wilson.

And what I ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who in the days of their distress with a tin cup, a pair of blue glasses and a dog and obtained from the treasury, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, two and a quarter billion dollars of the people's money in order that they might live, now propose to belittle the Cleveland convention and the man who rescued them from it and made it possible for the national banks alone to turn an annual loss of retrievable ruin and dreary desolation.

"THREE LONG YEARS" VALUES WIPED OUT

"Three long years" of normalcy and they had wiped out half the values accumulated in this nation since Christopher Columbus, and had the total income of all the people of these United States.

We did not dare to breathe a prayer or to give our anguish scope. Something was in each of us, and what was dead was hope.

Then came Franklin Roosevelt and assumed the heaviest burden that ever descended on any man since Washington knelt in the snow and Lincoln watched the Confederate flags across the Potomac. As his first act, he also knelt before an altar and prayed. As his second, he opened his arms to the nation and checked it in a day.

Where were his detractors then? They had sought refuge in the starmonger. They now cry "The republic is in peril. The republic is lost, and for all of them, it might have been."

The President of the United States Chamber of Commerce asked the President to assume the powers of a dictator for three long years and checked it in a day.

CAPITAL WAS FLOODED WITH IMPOTENT PUPPETS The capital was flooded with paper plans of impotent puppets of toyism begging government to assume responsibility for all.

The President scored these suggestions. With every word and act he breathed new confidence in American institutions, confidence in the leadership of traditional Americanism, and he twitted the nation for its fear of fear.

There is not an American who does not know what happened then. The returned the President's confidence in the leadership of traditional Americanism, and he twitted the nation for its fear of fear.

CONFIDENCE RESTORED IN NATION'S BANKS Need I remind you of that stroke of boldness which proclaimed the holiday of banks? Or the passage of the emergency banking act? Or the banking act of 1935, which together restored not only banking but public confidence in banks? Which withdrew banks from the feverish speculation of the stock market and made them banks again? Which strengthened their foundations and guaranteed their deposits and enticed thousands of dollars into the banks which had sought security in seclusion?

And need I remind you that the republicans who manipulated the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who before the American Bankers' Association denounced the federal deposit insurance act which guaranteed the deposits of the people throughout the United States, and as governor of his state exerted every ounce of influence at his command to prevent the banks of Kansas from entering the guaranteed system?

What I now ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who met at Cleveland two weeks ago, and the ticket which he nominated, approved this ticket, and whether, if returned to power, they will scuttle it again as they scuttled the great system set up by the administration of Woodrow Wilson.

And what I ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who in the days of their distress with a tin cup, a pair of blue glasses and a dog and obtained from the treasury, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, two and a quarter billion dollars of the people's money in order that they might live, now propose to belittle the Cleveland convention and the man who rescued them from it and made it possible for the national banks alone to turn an annual loss of $150,000,000 to a net profit of more than $200,000,000.

SEVEN THOUSAND CEASED TO EXIST During the four long years just prior to the Roosevelt administration, more than seven thousand banks went out of business, and total deposits in all banks decreased by more than $15,000,000,000.

Ask the eight million depositors in these vanished banks whether they desire to return to those days of ragged individualism. Ask them whether they favor the repeal or crippling of the guaranty of bank deposits and the election of a man as president who struggled to obstruct both its enactment and its administration.

The answer will be an overwhelming "no!" While under Mr. Hoover, more than 7,000 banks closed their doors permanently, only 264 state and national banks have closed since March 16, 1933, the end of the bank holiday, and only eight of them were national banks. Thus far in the good year 1936, not a single national bank in the United States has closed its doors in the faces of the people.

FOREIGN COMMERCE SHOWS INCREASE Need I here recount the efforts of the great secretary of state, Mr. Cordell Hull, to pry ajar the gates of foreign trade and start again the movement of international commerce and good will?

Through the trade agreements authorized by congress and consummated under that authority, our commerce with other nations has increased from 27 per cent of normal in March, 1933, to 56 per cent of normal in April, 1936; or from $2,933,000,000 in 1932 to $4,530,000,000 in 1935.

But in spite of this, we witnessed in the recent republican convention a bitter denunciation of the power given to the President by the emergency banking act of 1933, which together restored not only banking but public confidence in banks? Which withdrew banks from the feverish speculation of the stock market and made them banks again? Which strengthened their foundations and guaranteed their deposits and enticed thousands of dollars into the banks which had sought security in seclusion?

And need I remind you that the republicans who manipulated the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who before the American Bankers' Association denounced the federal deposit insurance act which guaranteed the deposits of the people throughout the United States, and as governor of his state exerted every ounce of influence at his command to prevent the banks of Kansas from entering the guaranteed system?

What I now ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who met at Cleveland two weeks ago, and the ticket which he nominated, approved this ticket, and whether, if returned to power, they will scuttle it again as they scuttled the great system set up by the administration of Woodrow Wilson.

And what I ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who in the days of their distress with a tin cup, a pair of blue glasses and a dog and obtained from the treasury, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, two and a quarter billion dollars of the people's money in order that they might live, now propose to belittle the Cleveland convention and the man who rescued them from it and made it possible for the national banks alone to turn an annual loss of financial debauchery which had blown into their nostrils an alien odor, and the result was the passage of the security and exchange acts for the protection of the people.

These measures were denounced in blarney. But the issue of peace and honest securities has increased 50 per cent; the value of old ones by more than 40 per cent.

In their platform they stammer a pious sentence in behalf of regulation of interstate securities and interstate activities of public utilities. But we have already done it.

GIANT HOLDING COMPANIES BUILT UP They sat in the folds of comfortable and luxurious upholstery while a giant system of holding companies was built one upon another in the public utility field, wringing exorbitant profits from investors, operating companies and consumers.

But did the leaders of old or new guards in republicanism lash their faces into scarlet or their hearts into indignation over the despoilation of innocent people?

Among all the tethered and muzzled spokesmen of the doctrine of laissez faire no warning was uttered or relief properly. From the lips of none who controlled or were chosen by the Cleveland convention came or has come either movement or utterance indicating either knowledge of the subject or ability or inclination to deal with it.

The administration of Franklin Roosevelt found the spreading cancer and removed it, and will administer to the affected parts the healing processes of honesty from which will come a healthier growth and fuller service.

What I ask and the people have a right to know is whether the republican platform contemplates the honest enforcement of the new emergency banking act of 1933, which together restored not only banking but public confidence in banks? Which withdrew banks from the feverish speculation of the stock market and made them banks again? Which strengthened their foundations and guaranteed their deposits and enticed thousands of dollars into the banks which had sought security in seclusion?

And need I remind you that the republicans who manipulated the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who before the American Bankers' Association denounced the federal deposit insurance act which guaranteed the deposits of the people throughout the United States, and as governor of his state exerted every ounce of influence at his command to prevent the banks of Kansas from entering the guaranteed system?

NO ASSURANCES FROM CLEVELAND The croaking noises which rise from the swamps of old deal complacency will not suffice. The people call for assurance that the structure of honesty and freedom which we have erected shall not be destroyed. Has that assurance come out of Cleveland? Is it in their platform? Is it in their hearts? Is it in their insulating speeches? No.

When we take stock of the nation's farming interests, how may I adequately express the new hope, the restored confidence, the economic resurrection of the American farmer. In 1920, 1924, 1928 and 1932, the hollow and hucksterish promises made by republican platforms and candidates to restore agriculture to economic equality with industry. The program which they have failed to fulfill or intended for fulfillment. It has been repeated again in their platform in 1936, with no more thought of its accomplishment now than in the past.

During the "four long years" of Mr. Hoover the burdens were piled still higher on the farmer's back, while half a million farmers were taken from the treasury and poured into a fantastic exhibition of agricultural pantomimery.

It is interesting and revealing to revert to the recent past and revive some of the platform and convention utterances of the republican group which now complain against our successful program of farm rehabilitation.

HARDING'S STATEMENT AT 1916 CONVENTION In 1916, Warren G. Harding, temporary chairman of the republican convention which nominated Charles E. Hughes for president, said:

"It is interesting and revealing to revert to the recent past and revive some of the platform and convention utterances of the republican group which now complain against our successful program of farm rehabilitation."

Producers of crops whose total volume exceeds the needs of the domestic market must continue at a disadvantage until the government shall interfere as seriously and as effectively in behalf of the farmer as it has intervened in behalf of labor and industry. There is a need of supplemental legislation for the control and orderly handling of agricultural surplus, in order that the price of the surplus may not determine the price of the whole crop."

In the democratic platform of 1932 we find the following declaration:

"The farmer is the backbone of the nation. National greatness and economic independence demand a population distributed between industry and the farm, and sharing on equal terms the prosperity which it holds in wholly dependent on the efforts of both. Neither can prosper at the expense of the other without inviting joint disaster."

I have recalled these party pledges to remind you that by 1932 both political parties had recognized the agricultural problem, not as local, but as national. Both parties advocated the control of production in order to prevent unsalable surpluses. The difference was that the democratic platform meant what it said and was immediately fulfilled when the opportunity came to us.

AAA A FULFILLMENT OF PLEDGE TO FARMER The agricultural adjustment act was the fulfillment of this pledge to the farmers of the nation. Under this act, which was voluntary and not compulsory, the prices of farm products were increased, sometimes doubled and tripled, and more than $3,000,000,000 were added to the annual income of agriculture. It was because of this increase in farm income and the opening of the facilities of financial credit to the farmer that he has been able to save more than three-quarters of a million homes, begin the payment of his debts, the repair of his barns and the purchase of things produced by others.

It was because of this that in every referendum held among farmers on the continuation of the President's program, it has been approved by a vote of from 2 to 1 to 20 to 1.

It was because of this that when this act, and republican spokesmen were gleefully exulting over it, the voice of American agriculture appealed for the enactment of the soil conservation act, which they are working out another program for the enhancement of the rewards of farm life.

In the light of past republican fulminations in behalf of controlled agricultural production, their present devotion to uncontrolled abundance seems cheap and hollow.

"FLOW UNDER" PROGRAM COMMON IN BUSINESS The businessman and the manufacturer control their production to meet their market. When they shut down because of a slack in demand, they "flow under" their machines for the time being and discharge their wage-earners.

When business is ready to produce for abundance and not for profit, it will then be logical to ask the farmer to do likewise. But not until then. They have shed now tears over the premature death of pigs as if they had been born, educated and destined for the ministry or for politics.

But their bitter tears are not shed over the fate of little pigs. Their real grief comes from the slaughter of their hogs and the plunder and which they have fed on the people's substance.

They are not weeping because we have plowed under a row of cotton. Mr. Hoover started them. Their real sorrow springs from the fact that we have plowed under the old and antiquated conception of old government and its chance ever restored to the control of American life.

Having declared for 20 years that the agricultural problem was national, and four years ago having declared for controlled acreage and production, the republican leaders have now turned around and declared for the doctrine of scarcity.

BENEFIT PAYMENTS DECLARED CONSISTENT Having allowed nearly a million family type farms to become subject to immediate loss, they now grow their loss for hogs and they declare that benefit payments, such as we have for three years been making, are consistent with a balanced budget.

In 1932, they were for "controlled" production. We enacted it into law. Now they are for "economic" production, by which I suppose they mean "cheap" production. These are weasel words of the first magnitude.

The Roosevelt administration has inaugurated soil conservation under an intelligent program. The republican platform tardily follows in the rear.

Denouncing experimentation by the Roosevelt administration, the republican platform for political purposes proposes to extend "experimental" aid to farmers in developing new crops.

In one breath, they propose to assist in selling agricultural surplus abroad by the bargaining process, and in the next they would embargo all agricultural imports, which would mean the loss of 50,000,000 acres of land in cultivation for export crops; and in still another breath, they propose to repeal the law authorizing trade agreements.

"FOUR LONG YEARS" OF FAILURE CITED With that omnipotence which they claim but never exercise, they propose to repeal the law authorizing trade agreements. But it was their dismal failure for "four long years" that rendered consumption by one-third of our population impossible except for the bounty of the government.

They reject now controlled production, but offer the mirage of a New Deal which has covered every year since 1920? Did the republican administration balance the budget? They merely juggled the estimates of revenue and expenditures. Spending little to retrieve disaster, they increased the public debt by more than four billion dollars.

But the people have been told the foundations of national credit are sinking because of an unbalanced budget.

Deficits and debts: Who began the deficits which have covered every year since 1920? Did the republican administration balance the budget? They merely juggled the estimates of revenue and expenditures. Spending little to retrieve disaster, they increased the public debt by more than four billion dollars.

DEFICITS, DEBTS, TAXES LAID TO DEMOCRATS In the hymns of hate which emanated from the recent outbursts of republican oratory in national convention, deficits and debts are treated as a new development of the Roosevelt administration. The New Deal is portrayed as the father of one, the mother of another and the godfather of the other.

But these apostles of concealment withheld from their fervid Jeremiah the fact that during the four long years of Mr. Hoover the accumulated deficit in the Treasury amounted to more than six billion dollars, although they insist that consumers' taxes from 35 to 60 per cent.

They did not tell you and will not tell you that during the four long years these deficits and unbalanced budgets there was no federal relief program and no public works program; that the federal government was therewith this burden on the federal doorstep not under Hoover but under Roosevelt.

There was a lack for which the federal government was not prepared. But there was no alternative but to assume it.

It was thought that funds should be loaned to the states to be at some time repaid.

This course for various reasons, one being that many of the states could not obligate themselves, had to be abandoned. It was understood and it was theoretically required that the states should make substantial contributions to the relief of their own people.

FAILURE OF SOME IN RELIEF TASK Some of them undertook in good faith to meet the requirements. Others did nothing. Some states were able to balance their budgets because they made no contribution out of their states and counties and cities to house the homeless.

Those who seek to play miserable politics with human misery shout that these billions of dollars spent for relief have been poured out in reckless waste.

The Works Progress Administration has given employment to 3,500,000 people, 95 per cent of whom were on the relief rolls in the several states.

With the money and labor thus provided, between 20,000 and 30,000 houses have been constructed and repaired. These include school houses, water and sewer systems, park and playgrounds, public building, flood control projects, and other public market highways, streets and other public improvement.

In addition, the Public Works Administration has given grants and loans to local communities, has given employment to more than 3,500,000 workers for a full year.

WHO SHALL QUESTION THE OIL FIELD? Who shall assert that these sums have been wasted? Who shall say that these thousands of useful additional jobs for men and women of communities all over the nation have not brought permanent values not otherwise obtainable? Who shall claim that these two great work administration programs have not impetus to the civic standards of the people?

Shall we measure these values against a budget temporarily unbalanced? But the theme song of our antagonists is the destruction of the nation's credit, and the wrapping of the nation in the swaddling clothes of debt.

When we entered the World War in 1917, our public debt was $2,000,00

CHAIRMAN RIDICULES REPUBLICAN ATTACK

Thinly Veiled Reference to
Smith Made in Opening Address.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—(AP)—The text of the address delivered by Chairman Farley of the democratic national committee in opening the democratic national convention today follows:

In inaugurating this convention I am conscious of a great responsibility. The occasion which brings us together is one of the most momentous in the history of our country.

The continuance of the New Deal is the issue. The question before the American people is not a party question, but a question of the future of the country. Shall we continue the New Deal which has rescued our country from disaster, and despair or shall the government be turned back to the old dealers who wrecked it?

There you have the issue stripped of all camouflage.

GRAVITY OF ISSUE AND RESPONSIBILITY.

The gravity of this issue is the measure of our responsibility as we assemble here today. Is the nation to move forward or is it to turn backward to the old dealers of such recent and bitter memory?

Fortunately for us and for the country, we know now that the old dealers stand right where they have always stood. The convention at Cleveland, held in manner and method, revealed once more that old habits are not abandoned.

I am not trying to stir the members of the committee which has served so faithfully, or the delegates to this convention, into any frenzy of excitement by stressing the gravity of what lies ahead of us, and which makes this campaign a matter of the ordinary political struggle inseparable from a presidential election.

I merely wish to impress on all of us the significance of the task to which we are committing ourselves. I want to point out that while the political skies seem fair for our party and our destined candidates, and of us believe that the country will echo our desires in unmeasured enthusiasm, and a record majority, confidence in the outcome is not enough.

ELECTION OUTCOME VITAL TO NATION.

The consequences of the coming election are vital to the future of this nation. Because of their gravity no one of us dares do less than his utmost towards assuring that the candidate who will testify to the national desire that the processes of recovery, initiated and carried on by Franklin D. Roosevelt, shall not be interrupted. That verdict must be a fair one, and, no conclusion, so compelling that nobody can doubt that the country is united in its determination that there shall be no backward step in our progress.

Our party will remain in power so long as its ideals and purposes do not deviate from the straight path of public service.

We are a fortunate party; first in the high patriotism and caliber of our president; second in that we are on the right side both morally and economically.

The minority party has, by force of circumstance, been compelled to adopt a platform unsurpassed in the history of party declarations for platitudes and vague promises.

Some day, they pledge themselves to accomplish what our administration has already accomplished. Some day they will go back to the same economic position that the New Deal has put him, but never do they say, how they are going to do it.

OPPOSITES WOULD USE OLD SYSTEM.

Some day they are going to establish business on a basis comparable with that upon which our conduct of national affairs has placed it—but first they would go back to the system that brought on the great panic.

Some day they are going to be assured of all the favors they enjoyed under republican rule and at the same time everybody is to have equal opportunity and unbounded prosperity.

And their some day candidates through this platform tell the country, as a distracted mother tells her faithful babies, that they have the moon for which they have been faithfully reaching and waiting because they cannot reach it.

They are going to relieve poverty, without spending money, provide jobs without it costing industry anything, and bring happiness and contentment to everybody—some day.

As chairman of the democratic national committee it has become my happy duty to call this convention to order; to present the recommendations of the committee for the consideration of the delegates to the convention; and to call for the election of officers to conduct the deliberations of this body until the convention itself shall complete the permanent organization.

My status as a delegate from the state of New York.

Before I relinquish this gavel I wish to make a brief report on the work of the democratic national committee since it assumed direction of the party's affairs at the 1932 convention.

A NEW ERA IN COUNTRY'S AFFAIRS.

That convention inaugurated a new era in our country's affairs. Through the masterful work of the candidates of the 1932 convention and the congress which were elected in sympathy with them, our country has been lifted out of the worst depression in its history into a fair high way that leads to permanent prosperity.

Ordinarily, as you know, the national committee of our own and of the minority party fall into a deep sleep at the close of a convention and hibernate for four years. Following the precedent established by my predecessor, the democratic national committee has taken a different course, actuated by the belief that presidential campaign, with all that it means to our nation, is not something to be hurried through in a few hectic weeks.

As a matter of fact, we could not have remained idle, even if we had so desired. As soon as they thought that partisan politics made it necessary the party we had ousted from control of the government began sniping at the policies they had applauded and participated in.

They were grateful for these policies when our country was undergoing the extreme crisis of the disaster they had been rescued from, and their administration had permitted to come upon us.

As soon as the huge financial interests that have been the backbone of every republican administration of recent years had been rescued from the depths of loss and again began to make money, they exerted their pressure, furnished the funds, and

Clark Howell Addresses the Georgia Delegation in Caucus—Counting the Ballots for Committeeman

"I am proud of the part I have played in sending our Governor to the woods," said Clark Howell, who succeeds Governor Talmadge as national committeeman from Georgia, "and I am going to do my best to keep him there." engaged in a crusade of vituperation and detraction in an effort to destroy the faith of the people in the president.

PEOPLE BROUGHT FROM HELPLESS STATE.

He had brought them out of their desperate state when they were helpless, the situation of the country, and insisting that fortune for the few and poverty for the many did not spell prosperity, and they, feeling themselves threatened with the deprivation of the unearned and unearned favors and privileges they had enjoyed so long, inaugurated the movement for a return to the old system of everything for them and nothing for the plain people.

Then it was that the minority party orators and the newspapers controlled by the big interests began telling our people that Franklin D. Roosevelt sought to be a dictator. Then it was that the laws congress had enacted, and for which many of the senators and representatives of their own party voted, were denounced as being intended to make our country a socialist and communistic state.

Then it was that they proclaimed that the measures undertaken and functioning successfully to bring back a restoration of business, decrease unemployment, and to take care of the jobless until such time as returning prosperity would reach them into normal industry, were all the product of dreamers and visionaries.

Anybody unfamiliar with American politics would have gathered from these outcries that our hard-working, systematic, public-serving president was sitting in the White House with a war helmet on his head, booted and spurred, and ready to lead a bayonet charge on congress if they hesitated in carrying out his despotic orders.

Farley thanks party leaders. Under these conditions, we naturally had to get together, and we attempted to outline for you the activities of the organizations in the various sections of the country, but I found it impossible to do so. I am sure that you will all agree that the state democratic authorities cooperated effectively and enthusiastically, and I want to thank them publicly for their loyalty, which in no manner is responsible for the state of confidence in which we meet today.

You are all familiar, I believe, with the work performed at the headquarters in Washington, and I am authorized to express in your name our thanks to my colleagues at headquarters for their faithfulness with which they have discharged their task.

Perhaps I ought to mention in this connection another agency that has contributed much to the jubilant feeling we have in regard to the outcome of the election in November.

Do I need to say that I refer specifically to the republican convention in Cleveland? By their platform they would have assured our victory, I believe, even had our national organization remained dormant during the whole pre-convention period.

decision of the Supreme Court; and all the other emergency activities made necessary to escape the blight of the last four years of the republican regime.

NET DEBT INCREASE. COMPARES FAVORABLE. When we deduct from the net increase in the public debt the more than $3,000,000,000 which will be repaid by those who have borrowed from the government because of the unwillingness or inability of other lending agencies, we find that the net increase in the public debt is but little more than that of the previous administration, which left little to show for its extravagance.

This great program of rehabilitation has been carried out not by endangering but by enhancing the credit of the government.

In 1932, the bonds of the United States sold as low as 83 cents on the dollar. Since the advent of the New Deal, these bonds have risen until today none sell for less than 97, while some sell for as much as 100.

During the same period, $175,000,000 in annual interest was saved by a reduction in the interest rates. Not only have the prices of bonds increased while interest rates were being reduced, but each new issue offered by the treasury has been largely over-subscribed.

None but the blind and arrogant partisan would assert that the credit of the United States has suffered under the impetus given to public confidence by the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

FOR DEFENSE IN WAR. During the world's greatest war, we could afford to spend more than $30,000,000,000 in defense of our country.

It was against depression, against the demoralization and disintegration of our social and economic life, we have spent not a dollar more than we have received in taxes and profits out of the people's pockets.

We have increased taxes. So did the last republican administration. They increased them on consumers. We have adjusted our new taxes according to the ability of the taxpayer to pay. We have increased taxes on the wealthy, and the increase in income tax has not kept pace with the increase in income and values.

Under the policies of the Roosevelt administration have produced. We shall balance the budget. We shall balance the books in the treasury. We shall soon ordain that no discrepancy between income and outgo shall exist. But we shall not do it at the expense of human life or the degradation of the spirit and morale of our people.

But we are told by the smug and cynical apostles of the status quo that the supreme court has nullified some of the acts of this administration. And while anxious farmers ponder the fate, and laboring men seek the heavens for a rainbow of hope, and women and children look in vain for the preservation of their lives and health, a voice from the grave at Palo Alto shouts, "Thank God for the supreme court."

As an institution I respect it, and I would be both unfair and unjust if I were unwilling to accord it the respect of the bench and the right to their views of law and constitution which I claim for myself.

But there is nothing new in controversies over the constitution. They began in the convention which was adopted to it by the first congress that assembled under it.

LAWYERS HAVE BEEN INVADATED BEFORE. If in the future further amendments should become necessary to enable the people to work out their destiny and protect their fundamental rights, or to overcome some arbitrary interpretation of the constitution by its framers, I doubt not that the people will face that duty with the same calm intelligence which has guided them in the past.

HERE IS THE RECORD IN COLD STATISTICS

I do not wish to burden this address with statistics, but for the sake of those who measure life by figures on a table, I give you the essential indexes of improvement:

Farm prices 50 per cent.
Farm income 33 per cent.
Farm purchasing power 40 per cent.

Factory payroll 59 per cent.
Purchasing power of same 50 per cent.

Factory employment 33 per cent.
Industrial earnings 35 per cent.
Stock market prices 40 per cent.

Bank deposits 33 per cent.
Railroad traffic 16 per cent.
Automobile production 30 per cent.

Construction permits 50 per cent.
Industrial production 50 per cent.
National bank earnings 100 per cent.

Decline in commercial failures 66 per cent.
Increase in national income 50 per cent.

New securities issued 50 per cent.
Perhaps the most significant of all, to industry is the decline of 66 per cent in the rate of business failures and the decline of bank failures of 100 per cent.

FIGURES DO NOT TELL THE STORY. But there are human values far beyond these figures. The important point is not merely that farm prices have increased, but American agriculture has been rescued from impending disaster. It is not merely that the condition of labor has been improved by the reduction of the number of unemployed from 15 millions to 10 millions of workers, but that labor has been rescued from the brink of penury and that with one-fourth of our population destitute, their health, comfort and self-respect have been saved.

There has been no addition, riot or bloodshed during the worst human catastrophe in our history.

Not merely that banking and industry have been saved from bankruptcy, but that faith in banking and industry have been revived.

The answer to that enigma of demoralization and despair is that we have been saved and others who may not have needed it as old as Hamletian reaction and Jeffersonian democracy have been saved.

Benefit have been bestowed upon all groups with as even a hand as government can assume.

But there are other gains which have been recorded in the past three years of which I am thinking, and which the American people are thinking.

MORAL CONTRIBUTIONS BEYOND DOLLAR MEASURE. These are the moral and spiritual contributions we have made to the life of our people which are beyond reckoning by the standards of the dollar.

We talk of the gold standard, the gold content of the dollar, and men who know the history and the significance of money talk about the gold dollar and the so-called return to gold, denying the obvious fact that the American people have a larger reserve of gold behind today than ever before, is the soundest medium of exchange among all the nations of the world today.

But I am thinking of those immortal reserves of character which partake of the essence of the heart and soul of a nation which have been saved and which are being saved by what we have been trying to do.

I am thinking that while we have preserved homes and acres and railroads and the life of our people, we have also preserved the moral and spiritual values that take form in the realms of pride and service and honor.

WE HAVE MADE GOVERNMENT REAL. We have preserved and stimulated respect for law and the rights of the average man.

We have increased the loyalty of the people to the government which should be the basis of our life.

We have restored the faith from which must spring the defenders of the flag and of the constitution.

We have renewed and re-enforced the belief that after all government and trusted leaders may hear and heed the voice of the common man.

We have rekindled the vanishing faith in the survival of the best as the fittest.

We have revitalized the answer to the question which has rung through all the ages, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

We have sought to confound the cynics who despise the moral conceptions of the more abundant life for which the Master lived and died.

DEMOCRATIC CONCLAVE
PROVIDES GREAT SHOW

Philadelphia Convention Is
in History.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.

Away back in the earliest years of the Christian era, there lived in Rome one of the world's greatest reporters, from then to now and even reckoning in the B. C. period. His name was Juvenal, and he was, in reality, a columnist, only he used tablets instead of a tabloids for his writings.

For Juvenal was the prophet of the overtaxed people, Juvenal wrote that the government sought to compose the situation and to placate the people by "bread and the circus games."

Of course, it is a far cry from the first century to the 20th, from the battles of gladiators of the past to the battling with the microphones of the present. But, at last, there is an analogy that is quite evident here in Philadelphia at this democratic national convention.

We have this extraordinary spectacle in progress here and to continue in an associated manner of amplification, splendor and excitement until it comes to the transcendent climax and culmination of Saturday night when the choice of the president of the convention for president will be heard before 90,000 cheering, flag-waving, emotional people and accept the honor that has been conferred upon him.

Countless Bands.

That is the circus part of the grand finale of the circus of the week. It will be a great show. It will follow five days of oratory, vaudeville, and music of every kind, both outdoors and in, music by countless bands, loud speakers howling hoarsely on every downtown street corner, parades, pageants, and participation extended to the extreme limit. The plaudits of it and the talk

Jurnal spoke about bread, as well as circus games. That, too, has been attended to in the magnificent manner of the delegates to the congress who have handed bread. So far they are mostly living on cake, but the convention will start Saturday and it is unlikely a few dollars or dollars more may come in handy. However, a great many of the people who sent the delegates were worried about the bread at the end of it, and that makes the set-up complete.

I have seen a great many national conventions since I came here, and none before like this. It has been skillfully stage-managed, produced and exhibited. This is a great flamboyant, colorful, picturesque affair, and it can be built up to a leading man in such a gathering of people who know the show business, especially when there are so many superb and super-per-showman himself.

Even in its progol today it was impressive, and, as it plays its five

Owing to the necessities of publicity, it is necessary to magnify little things that happen into big things. The convention has no more news in it than last year's statesman's yearbook. If you could let it over, There has never been a more honest body of men in nomination of Roosevelt and Garner. No responsible person has ever thought that the convention will not increase in size and even in interest, and no one has ever doubted that President Roosevelt, as is his power and privilege, it, and will be, the supreme thing that has ever been said and done officially.

tions and I have never seen one yet, where the management was efficient, that did not run exactly to schedule. That is how this convention is running and will run. That is politics, and there never was a convention more political than this one.

Meanwhile, there have been few, if any where the spectacular features management have been as well worked out as at this one. It is already a great pageant, and it will work along, increasing scale, to Saturday night when they plan a spectacle that is hoped to impel all American humanity into ardent support of the President and his policies.

O. HENRY ENCORE

The Lost Works of W. Sidney Porter (O. Henry)

A STRANGE CASE

A Post reporter met a young Houston physician the other afternoon, with whom he is well acquainted, and suggested that they go into a neighboring cafe and partake of a cooling lemonade. The physician agreed, and they were soon seated at a little table in a quiet corner, under an electric fan. After the physician had paid for the lemonade, the reporter turned the conversation upon his practice, and asked if he did not meet with some strange cases in his experience.

"Yes, indeed," said the doctor, "many that professional etiquette will not allow me to mention, and others that involve no especial secrecy, but are quite as curious in their way. I had one case only a few weeks ago that I considered very unusual, and without giving names, I think I can relate it to you."

"By all means do so," said the reporter, "and while you are telling it, let us have another lemonade."

The young physician looked serious at this proposition, but after searching in his pocket and finding another quarter he assented.

"About a week ago," he began, "I was sitting in my office, hoping for a patient to come in, when I heard footsteps, and looking up, saw a beautiful young lady enter the room. She advanced at the curious gait I ever beheld in one so charming. She staggered from side to side and lurching one way and another, succeeding only by a supreme effort in reaching the chair I placed for her. Her face was very lovely, but showed signs of sadness and melancholy.

"Doctor," she said, in a very sweet, but sorrowful voice, "I want to consult you about my condition, and as it is a most unusual affection, I will have to trouble you to listen to a no doubt tedious discourse upon my family history."

"Madam," said I, "my time is yours. Anything you have to say that will throw light upon your trouble will, of course, benefit me in my diagnosis."

"She thanked me with a smile that for a moment erased the sad lines from her face."

"My father," she said, "was one of the Adamsons of eastern Texas. You have doubtless heard of the family history."

"Perhaps so," I replied, "but there are many families by the name of Adamson."

"It is of no consequence," she continued with a little wave of her hand. "Fifty years ago a violent feud broke out between my grandfather's family and another family of old Texas settlers named Redmond. The bloodshed and inhumanities exchanged between the people of each side would fill volumes. The horrors of the old Kentucky and West Virginia feuds were repeated by them. An Adams would shoot a Redmond from behind a fence, at his table while eating, in a church, or anywhere; and a Redmond would murder an Adams in like manner. The most violent hatred imaginable existed between them. They poisoned each other's wells, they killed each other's stock, and if an Adams met a Redmond, only one would leave the spot. The children of each family were taught to hate the others from the time they could speak, and so the legacy of antipathy was handed down from father to son and from mother to daughter. For 30 years this battle raged between them and one by one the death-dealing rifle and revolver thinned the families until one day just 20 years ago there remained but a single representative of each family, Lemuel Adams and Louisa Redmond. They were both young and handsome, and at their first meeting forgot the ancient discord and hatred of so many years, standing was destined to rebound upon an innocent victim."

"I was the child of that marriage, and the Adams and Redmond blood would not mingle. As a babe I was like any other, and was even considered unusually prepossessing."

"I can well believe that, madam," I interrupted.

"The lady colored slightly and went on: "As I grew older a strange wariness and many adverse impulses began to sway me. Every thought or movement I made was met by a contradictory one. It was the result of hereditary antagonism. Half of me was Adams and the other half Redmond. If I attempted to look at an object, one of my eyes would give in another direction. If I tried to salt a potato while eating, the other hand would spontaneously reach out and sprinkle it with sugar."

"Hundreds of times while playing the piano, while one hand would strike the notes of a lovely Beethoven sonata, I could not keep the other from pounding out 'Over the Garden Wall' or 'The Skidmore Guards.' The Adams and the Redmond blood would not flow in harmony. If I went into an ice cream parlor, I would order a vanilla cream in spite of myself, when my very soul was clamoring for lemon. Many times I would strive with every nerve to disrobe for the night, and the opposing influence would be so strong that I have instead put on my finest and most elaborate clothing and retired with my shoes on. Have you ever met with a similar case, doctor?"

"Never," I said. "It is indeed remarkable. And you have never succeeded in overcoming the adverse tendency?"

"Oh, yes. By constant efforts and daily exercise I have succeeded so far that it troubles me now in one respect only. With one exception I am now entirely released from its influence. It is my locomotion that is affected. My lower limbs refuse to coincide in their movements. If I try to walk in a certain direction, one of them will take the step I desire, and the other tries to go by an entirely different route. It seems that one—of them is Adams, and the other Redmond. Absolutely the only time when they agree is when I ride a bicycle, and as one goes up when the other is going down, their opposite movements of course facilitate my progress; but when endeavoring to walk I find them utterly unmanageable. You observed my entrance into this room. If there anything you can do for me, doctor?"

"Your case is indeed a strange one," I said. "I will consider the situation, and if you will call tomorrow at 10 o'clock I will prescribe for you."

"She rose from her chair, and I assisted her down the stairs to her carriage, which waited below. Such a sprawling, ungainly, mixed up walk I never saw before."

"I meditated over her case for a long time that night and consulted all the authorities on locomotor ataxia, and diseases of the muscles, that I could find. I found nothing covering her case, and about midnight I wandered out along the streets for a breath of cool air. I passed a store kept by an old German whom I knew, and dropped in to speak a word with him. I had noticed some time before two tame deer he kept running about in a paddock in his yard. I asked him about them. He told me that they had been fighting, and had not been able to agree so he had separated them, placing each one in a separate yard. Of a sudden an idea came to me."

"The next day I had the young lady come to my office. I gave it to her, she read it, flushed and was inclined to be angry."

"Try it, madam," I said.

"She agreed to do so, and only yesterday I saw her on the street, walking as gracefully and easily as any lady in the city."

"What was your prescription?" asked the reporter.

"It was simply to wear a pair of bloomers," said the young physician. "You see by separating the opposing factions harmony was restored. The Adams and the Redmond divisions no longer clashed, and the cure of the patient was complete. Let me see," continued the physician, "it is nearly half past seven, and I have an engagement to call upon her at eight. In confidence, I must say that she has consented to change her name to mine at an early date. I would not have you repeat what I have told you, of course."

"To be sure, I will not," said the reporter. "But won't you take another lemonade?"

"No, no, thank you," said the doctor, rising hurriedly. "I must go this evening. I will see you again in a few days."

Contrary to popular opinion, and to many newspaper stories about Will Rogers was not born in poor circumstances. His father, in addition to being a successful farmer, was judge of the Coconino district. Will was born November 4, 1879, in a roomy and comfortable ranchhouse about half-way between Claremore and Okla. In Indian Territory, Oklahoma. He, like his father, was far above the average person in mentality, and in school he mastered his studies with ease. Few men have ever occupied such a place as he held in the affections of the American people.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

CAPTAIN VANCOUVER'S TRAVELS.

III—Quadra and Vancouver Island. Captain Vancouver was not the first to explore the straits and sounds of the British Columbia-Washington region, but he did a great deal of map-making, and learned more about shore lines than had been known before. To dozens of places he gave names, some of which are in use to this day.

After three months spent in going up the Strait of Georgia, and out to the ocean by way of Queen Charlotte's sound, Vancouver turned southward until his ships cast anchor at Friendly Cove, Nootka sound, on the western edge of the island. At this place English merchants had had a trading post, but the land had been claimed by the Spaniards, who were in control when Vancouver got there.

Chief among the Spaniards was Senor Bodega y Quadra. This man, who had treated the British coldly, but he did not. On the contrary, he greeted Captain Vancouver most kindly. Together they sat down to talk over the treaty between their nations. They could not agree on just what the treaty meant, but the more they talked the more friendly they felt toward each other. The friendship which grew between them is an interesting sidelight of history. Thirty-three years ago a monument was set up at Friendly Cove in memory of the two men. What should the island be called? Captain Vancouver had sailed around it, but he probably would not have thought of naming it for himself if it had not been for a certain talk with Quadra. The Spaniard wanted something to be done to express the friendship of those who had met together in the name of Spain and Great Britain—the island was called "Quadra and Vancouver's Island." That name lasted about half a century, but then it gave way to the present form, "Vancouver Island."

SOCIETY SECURITY ACT FACES COURT TEST

NEWARK, N. J., June 23.—(UP)—The constitutionality of the federal social security act was attacked in an action brought today before Federal Judge Guy L. Fike on the grounds the act is class legislation, discriminatory and violates the "due process" clause of the constitution.

Judge Fike, on application of the receivers of the Newark Milk Company, issued an order requiring Colonel William H. Kelly, collector of internal revenue for northern New Jersey, to show cause on June 29 why he should not be restrained from collecting any tax from the plaintiffs for the purposes of the social security act.

U. S. Officer Forced Into Gutter At Bayonet-Point by Jap Soldier

PEIPING, June 23.—(AP)—Japanese bayonets cleared the way for Peiping's mightiest martial display in nearly 40 years today—with the United States army captain and other foreigners reported forced from the roads and sidewalks.

Chinese reports said Captain Henry S. Jernigan, U. S. A., attached to the United States embassy as a language student, was shoved from the roadway with a bayonet point against his stomach by a Japanese soldier.

Captain Jernigan, a native of Hopkinsville, Ky., thrust the weapon aside and escaped injury, the reports said.

Other Americans and persons from abroad were said to have been pushed off the streets by bayonet-armed troops to make way for Japanese nations, gathered to witness the presentation of a regimental flag sent by Emperor Hirohito to the North China garrison.

With hughes baring, Japanese soldiers, estimated to number 3,000, marched through the streets, keeping Peiping in a state of excitement.

Later they massed in a field offered by foreign embassies while their officers exhorted them to greater patriotism and more valorous deeds in the name of the emperor.

Chinese residents were patently irritated by the display. For the most part they remained conspicuously absent during the ceremonies.

Captain Jernigan, dressed in mufti, was standing in the roadway watching the Japanese troops when the soldier, armed with a bayonet, pressed him back, ostensibly to keep the walk clear for Japanese.

The American grasped the bayonet in both hands, it was reported, forcing it aside and calling the attention of a Chinese policeman to the incident.

Witnesses said the embarrassed policeman replied: "Citizen, you will save my face if you will move on quietly. I can do nothing with the Japanese."

The Jernigan incident was reported preceded by a similar affair involving the wife of a French officer attached to the French embassy guard.

The French woman was walking along the curb of a sidewalk skirting the old Austrian legation quarter, where the Japanese maneuvers were held.

Persons at the scene said a Japanese soldier suddenly made a gesture toward her with a bayonet, presumably to frighten her away.

She refused to give ground. The eyewitnesses said, and the soldier thrust the bayonet in front of her eight-year-old son.

When the boy cried out in terror the soldier withdrew his bayonet but shoved the mother in the muddy gutter, spectators related.

Throughout the ceremonies the Japanese soldiers were stationed at the entries of several embassies and legations, as well as midway between each block in the legation quarter.

SOUTHERN ENGRAVERS HEAR CHICAGO LEADER

Louis Flader Addresses Supper Meeting; Clinic Attracts Attention.

Louis Flader, commissioner of the American Photo-Engravers' Association, was principal speaker at 8 o'clock last night at a smoker held at a downtown hotel in connection with the photo-engraving conference and demonstration now being held in this city.

The conference is the first attempt in this country to bring together all the phases of photo-engraving and allied fields. Photo-engravers, advertising men, artists and printers are among those attending the conference.

A feature of the conference, which is in effect a photo-engraving "clinic," are the demonstrations held 9 to 12 o'clock each morning and from 2 until 6 o'clock each afternoon at the Southern Engraving Company plant and at the physics building at Georgia Tech.

Much interest has been shown at these demonstrations of the latest and most efficient methods of photo-engraving. Round-table discussions at 7:30 o'clock each night at the Georgia Tech building are also a feature.

From present indications, officials report that a similar clinic-conference will be held at the national convention this fall.

Flader is an authority in the photo-engraving field, and is known to know more about it than any other man in the world. His speech touched on various problems of photo-engraving.

Norman J. Wrigley, of Atlanta, president, and special entertainment was presented.

Asks Council Re-election

ALVIN L. RICHARDS.

SETTLEMENT IS MADE WITH ANN HEWITT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—(AP)—An out-of-court settlement for about $150,000 terminated tonight one phase of the Ann Cooper Hewitt's sensational $500,000 suit against her mother, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, over the large estate left the 21-year-old heiress by her father.

Several months ago Miss Hewitt, in a suit against her mother, the known physician and others, claimed she had been duped into a sterilization operation in a plot to tighten her mother's hold on her estate.

Russell P. Tyler, Anne's attorney, announced today the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company of Maryland had settled the little heiress' claim against the bond posted by the mother as guardian of Anne's estate interest for about $150,000.

In Baltimore E. Asbury Davis, president of the concern, said the settlement was for "less than $150,000." Tyler declared the settlement would in no way affect the $500,000 sterilization suit.

ALVIN RICHARDS SEEKS COUNCIL RE-ELECTION

Offers in New Sixth Ward; Once Served as Mayor Pro Tem.

Alvin L. Richards, thirteenth ward councilman and a former mayor pro tem. of the city, yesterday formally announced his candidacy for election to council from the new sixth ward, composed of the old ninth and thirteenth wards. He will run in the September 2 municipal primary.

Richards has served as a member of council for eight years, four years of which he was an alderman. He also bears the distinction of having been elected from two wards, the sixth and the thirteenth.

Since he became a member of the legislative body, he has sponsored many important and progressive measures; chief among which was the establishment of the city budget commission. He and Senator G. Everett Millican were joint authors of that measure.

He has served as chairman, as vice chairman and as a member of the police committee and has held posts on practically every other important committee of council.

In connection with his announcement, Richards said: "I am running on my record. The discerning public will recognize that not every member of the present city council is responsible for conditions of which the people do not approve and which reflect discredit upon our city."

"I pledge myself to continue the fight for sound, business-like operation of the city government. I have never voted for an appropriation without first learning that money was available to pay it. I am in no sense responsible for the present municipal deficit."

LUMBER YARDS BURN

GLENWOOD, Ark., June 23.—(AP)—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed more than half of the Caddo River Lumber Company here early today with an estimated loss of approximately $500,000.

PRESIDENT VETOES COAST GUARD BILL

Hurricane Patrol Measure in Gulf Waters Branded "Impracticable."

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—President Roosevelt vetoed today a bill for a coast guard hurricane patrol in Gulf waters, branding the proposal as "unnecessary, unsound and impracticable."

The measure authorized the assignment of coast guard vessels to cruise the Gulf of Mexico and near-by waters for the assistance of the weather bureau in charting the course, size and speed of tropical hurricanes.

In his veto message, the President said vessels for the hurricane patrol would be unable to withstand the pressure unless they were of the largest and most expensive type. He added that the coast guard craft already were in the hurricane area and messaged weather information frequently to land stations.

As originally written, the bill sought to make the hurricane patrol mandatory, but it was changed by a house committee to make its terms permissive.

"The change from mandatory to permissive form," wrote the President, "does not alter my belief that the legislation is unnecessary, unsound and impracticable. Existing statutory authority is entirely sufficient to authorize such measures as are desirable and practicable and I cannot, therefore, approve the enactment of further legislation in this regard."

Prominent Oklahoma Visitors Reveal Interesting Background

By Sally Forth.

MR. AND MRS. EUGENE LORTON are the attractive and interesting parents of Bob Lorton, whose marriage to Beverly Rogers is a brilliant event on today's social calendar. Bob's father is the kind of newspaper executive everyone likes to take orders from because he inspires love and respect. Mrs. Lorton's charms include beauty, magnetism and a naturalness of manner to which everyone surrenders. She is of medium height and has a slender, graceful figure. Her bobbed gray hair is done in a becoming style and her smiling hazel eyes instantly invite confidence and friendship.

Bob's mother is a patron of art and is an artist of no mean ability. She was a leading factor in the building of Tulsa's Art Museum, and belongs to the Ruskin Art Club, which has but 20 members on its roster. When Bob was born, Mrs. Lorton began compiling a book of his life without words. Mrs. Lorton's charms include beauty, magnetism and a naturalness of manner to which everyone surrenders. She is of medium height and has a slender, graceful figure. Her bobbed gray hair is done in a becoming style and her smiling hazel eyes instantly invite confidence and friendship.

Will Attend Convention

The book begins with Bob's one-year-old likeness and will be concluded with the picture of Bob and Beverly as the central figure in today's wedding, which takes place at All Saints church. Every interesting phase of Bob's life is recorded between the pages of the leather-bound book. Beverly entered his life history three years ago when at 15 years old she visited Barbara Heistand in Tulsa and met her future husband.

Mrs. Lorton knew the romance had its inception on that visit and so Beverly's beautiful picture adorns the page to that memorable meeting. Cupid's arrow joins the two hearts framing the pictures of Bob and Beverly, to record the time the bride-elect went to Bob's date to Washington and Lee commencement in Lexington, Va. A wreath of orange blossoms is destined to frame the bride's picture of Mr. and Mrs. Lorton when it is pasted in the book that illustrates the life of the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lorton.

THE SUN shines this afternoon in Kendallville, Ind., lovely Sarah McCray and Bob Candler will take their marriage vows in the beautiful gardens of the McCray estate, which is one of the show places of that state. The wedding is set for 4:30 o'clock and complete arrangements have been made for the ceremony to take place either in the house or the garden, depending entirely on the weather.

If the fates are kind, Sarah and Bob will stand before a natural altar of growing arbutus trees, flanked by huge Italian vases filled with Easter lilies. A long canopy will lead from the entrance of the estate across the entire length of the front lawn to the garden entrance. Beds of blue delphinium and candidum lilies, now in the height of bloom, will lend color to the setting, and a miniature falls will add its musical note as its waters fall into a small lake and eventually empty into a larger lake set in the midst of a woodland scene.

An enormous pavilion, with a canopy top, has been erected on the lawn for dancing after the ceremony. And even an improvised kitchen has been arranged behind a screen of foliage in readiness for the serving of the wedding supper. Have you ever heard of more elaborate preparations?

No smallest detail has been overlooked to make the nuptials perfect. Even the orange trees in Mr. McCray's Florida grove have contributed their beauty and fragrance by blooming out of season. Real orange blossoms, direct from the grove, will be used in all the bouquets, including those of the bride and each of her attendants, just for sentiment, you know.

And Sally must not forget to tell you of an arrangement of rare spathophyllium orchids that will adorn the dining room of the home where the bride's table will be placed. This variety of orchid, it seems, is a native of Miss Margaret Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Alvin Johnson, who was recently elected president of Alpha Delta Pi sorority at the University of Georgia. Miss Johnson will attend the sorority's national convention to be held in Del Monte, Cal., June 29 and 30.—Photograph by Bascom Biggers.

India, and is very seldom seen in this country. It is a tall stalk, producing calla-like flowers of pure white with dark rich foliage. This is just one of the many unusual details that will make for the perfection of the McCray-Candler wedding.

A FUTURE belle in every sense of the word is tiny Marian Cardwell, who opened her baby blue eyes yesterday in Alexandria, Va., the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bickerton W. Cardwell. This adorable bit of femininity is the daughter of the former Marian Calhoun, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, and bids fair to inherit the beauty and charm of her mother and the handsomeness of her father, who is a member of the faculty of the Episcopal High school in Alexandria.

The baby has been named Marian for her mother, and also for her grandmother, Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, who was before her marriage Marian Peel. The latter was in the Virginia city for the blessed event, which occurred at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Although here in Atlanta, no doubt the most thrilled member of the family is Mrs. A. W. Calhoun, for the arrival of little Marian makes her a great-grandmother for the second time. The other baby is Kathryn Jetton Calhoun, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Calhoun.

The many friends here, both from a personal and an inherited standpoint of this young baby, are looking forward with pleasure to the time when her lovely mother will be able to bring her to Atlanta for a visit.

Buffet Supper Feles Miss Thompson And Mr. Edwards

Climaxing a series of delightful pre-nuptial parties honoring Miss Maude Thompson and her fiancé, George Herbert Edwards, of Cleveland, Ohio, was the buffet supper given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. C. Smith and Miss Joyce Smith at their home on Inman circle. The affair followed the rehearsal of the marriage which is an important social event of today at the First Presbyterian church.

In the dining room an artistic arrangement of roses in a crystal bowl featured the center decorations of the table, while gracing either end was a crystal candelabra holding burning tapers. The other appointments were of silver.

The host and hostesses were assisted in entertaining by Miss Elinor Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Thompson, parents of the bride-elect. Mrs. Smith received her guests wearing a flowered chiffon and Miss Thompson wore aquamarine satin. Miss Joyce Smith was gowned in green mousseline de soie model and Miss Elinor Smith wore light blue lace. Present were members of the wedding party and two families and out-of-town guests, numbering 40.

Miss Carson Becomes the Bride Of Arthur Booth at Church Rites

Miss Catherine Cobb Carson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Carson, became the bride of Arthur Booth, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Arthur Booth, of Athens, at an impressive ceremony taking place yesterday at 5:30 o'clock at All Saints Episcopal church, the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

Dr. Richard Orme Flinn performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Prior to the ceremony, a nuptial music was rendered by Miss Emily Parmelee.

The interior of the church was beautifully decorated with quantities of palms and ferns amid which were placed tall pedestals and vases filled with lilies and white snapdragons. Pews reserved for members of the two families were marked by clusters of lilies and snapdragons tied with white satin ribbons.

Trouman Wilson, William Armstrong, Maye Brook, all of Athens, and F. Herrin were the groomsmen. Mrs. Howard Moffat, of Charlotte, acted as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Misses Margaret Carson, sisters of the bride, Albert Booth, of Athens, sister of the groom, Jeanne Massey, of Marietta, and Mrs. G. F. Herrin.

The bridal attendants were all gowned alike in aquamarine dresses of mousseline de soie fashioned along princess lines featuring a bateau neckline. The waistlines were marked by velvet sashes of a deeper shade of aquamarine extending below the hem of the dress. They wore large picture hats of leghorn trimmed in the same shade of velvet. They all carried shower bouquets of Roosevelt roses, snapdragons tied with aquamarine satin ribbon.

Entering with her father, Sam Carson, by whom she was given in marriage, the bride was met at the altar by the bridegroom and Hugh Jackson Jr., of Athens, who acted as best man. Her radiant beauty was further enhanced by her wedding gown of white satin fashioned along princess lines and worn in redingote style. The skirt extended from the waistline to form a long train. An exquisite yoke of rosepoint lace was a becoming feature and forming a small standing collar in the back. The cap shape veil was worn coronet style and fell to shoulder length. A long tulle veil fell in graceful folds over the long satin train. The bride carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley in shower effect.

Mrs. Sam Carson, mother of the bride, was handsomely gowned in a model of periwinkle blue lace with which she wore a large haku straw hat trimmed in blue. Her flowers were gardenias and lilies of the valley. Mrs. George Arthur Booth, of Athens, mother of the groom, wore a beautiful model of powder blue chiffon trimmed in pale pink chiffon. Her hat was of pale pink felt and her flowers were pink roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. A. S. J. Stovall, of Elberton, maternal grandmother of the groom, was lovely in black satin. Her flowers were gardenias.

Mr. Booth and his bride left for their wedding trip and after July 5 will reside in the Henrietta apartments in Athens where they will be celebrating their wedding anniversary during June, bridal contests were enjoyed. Refreshments carrying out the bridal decorations were served. Prizes were won by Mrs. Leach and Mrs. Stovall.

The fiesta is sponsored by St. Cecilia circle of St. Luke's church, and reservations can be made by phoning Mrs. Ann Neely, chairman, Hemlock 1553, Mr. Herbert Alden, Cherokee 2619, or Mrs. Hal Davidson, Hemlock 8717. Tickets are 50 cents.

Miss Elsie Reisman And Meyer Levy Wed At Progressive Club

Of cordial interest to a wide circle of relatives and friends was the marriage of Miss Elsie Reisman, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Reisman, of Miami Beach, Fla., to Meyer Levy, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Levy, of Atlanta, which was impressively solemnized last evening at 8 o'clock at the Jewish Progressive Club. Rabbi Harry H. Epstein and Cantor M. Landman performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The interior of the club was tastefully decorated with quantities of luxuriant palms and ferns which formed a background. Graceful seven-branched candelabra were placed at each side and held burning white tapers. The aisles were marked with white satin ribbons.

Mrs. Max Reisman, matron of honor, wore a beautiful gown of blue lace and the bride's cousin, Miss Marion Krieger, of Valdosta, maid of honor, was lovely in aquamarine blue. Their bouquets were of trillium roses. Little Miss Frances Krieger was junior bridesmaid and wore pink net. The group of lovely bridesmaids were Mrs. Simon Montag, Miss Louis Krieger, of Montgomery; Mrs. Irving Levy, Miss Charlotte Furman and Miss Ruth Drevich, of Miami Beach, Fla. They were gowned in lace frocks of pastel shades and carried bouquets of roses.

The best man was Max Rittenbaum and the groomsmen were Simon Montag, Al Reisman and Pete Silverman of Miami Beach, Fla.; Irving Levy and Arthur Reisman. Acting as ushers were Dr. Melvin Weinman, Ned Cohen, Nace Cohen, Sylvan Mackover, Leonard Greenbaum, Joe Blass, Philip Kantor, Joe Cuba, Oscar Fineroff, Simon Weider and Edward Valda. Little Donald Reisman, the bride's nephew, was ring-bearer and wore a white satin suit and the two small nieces of the groom, Delores Molnick and Sharon Levy, were the two flower girls.

The beautiful young bride was a picture of radiant loveliness as she entered with her father and mother. Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Reisman, by whom she was given in marriage. Her youthful brunette charm was enhanced by her handsome wedding gown of lustrous white duchesse satin and lace fashioned along simple lines. Her veil was of exquisitely dainty tulle and lace with a Russian coronet of orange blossoms and pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Reisman entertained at a reception on the roof garden of the club, serving cabaret style. The exquisitely appointed bride's table was set with a cutwork cloth, held as a central decoration a handsome four-tiered wedding cake.

Mrs. Reisman's gown was of peach lace and her corsage was of roses. Mrs. Levy wore a gown of orchid lace and her corsage was of roses. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Levy left for a wedding trip to New York and points east. The bride traveled in a navy blue triple sheer with accessories to match. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Levy will reside in Atlanta.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Reisman, Al Reisman, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Miller, Miss Charlotte Furman, Pete Silverman, Albert Reisman, Cantor Boris Schlachman, of Miami Beach, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. William Krieger and A. Cotsky, of New York; Miss Bailie daughter, of Montgomery, Ala.; Mr. Berlin, of Nashville, Tenn.

MRS. REGINALD FLEET.

July 21st marks the natal day of Mrs. Reginald Fleet, recently elected treasurer of the Atlanta Junior League.

This brings her under the influence of the zodiacal sign Cancer, the sign of love, home, conservatism, tenacity, dignity.

The Sun position in this chart bestows tact, perseverance, patience. It shows her to be intuitive with a cultivated mind—a lover of music and the fine arts.

This position adds quickness and alertness in thought, with the ability to express herself well either in the written or the spoken word.

In this chart the second decan of Cancer is ruled by Mercury, showing a strong, imaginative intellect. There is love of travel and learning. There is great capacity for work and high ideals.

The Moon-Saturn position gives what amounts to genius for organization and the ability to merit and occupy important posts. The Moon-Mars position adds courage to the nature.

The Sun-Saturn position gives perseverance, tact and self control. The Sun-Mars position bestows staunch friendships.

You can get your complete astrological forecast through The Constitution, compiled by Bernice Denton Pierson, one of America's best known astrologers. Mrs. Pierson does not profess the ability to tell fortunes, to foretell the future or to solve personal problems, but she can give you a complete and accurate rendition of the position of the Sun and planets at the time of your birth, carefully worked out, according to the strict rules of astrology. All you have to do is to fill in the coupon below including a self-addressed, stamped envelope, together with 10 cents in coin to cover the mailing cost. You will then receive through the mail certain pertinent facts which deal astrologically with the Sun at the time of your birth, called a Sun-chart, and with this Sun-chart, a series of numbers which will enable you to identify the planetary interpretations, which will be published in The Constitution each day, dealing with the influence of a given planet on the day of your birth, according to the rules of astrology. When you have checked each of your numbers your forecast will be complete.

Planetary Interpretations.
Below are planetary indications, according to the rules of astrology, one of which may apply to your forecast. Every day these interesting interpretations will be published, descriptive of the influence of the planets at the time of your birth. Your astrological forecast includes a Sun-chart and planetary interpretations, designed by numbers on your Sun-chart. Watch carefully day by day for your numbers.

Number 110—You have unusual power and determination, and the indications of success in your business or profession. The indications are that you would be most successful in the professions of Journalism, teaching, dramatics, commercial pursuits, law, and business administration. In selecting your vocation, select the one which will give you the greatest satisfaction. Number 102—You are deeply moved through your emotions and affections. The home life is an important feature in your success. You can only be happy where harmony and peace prevail. You are not inclined to mix business with pleasure, but do require refreshing recreation. You are fond of children. You prefer the refined and intellectual forms of pleasure rather than the more strenuous outdoor sports. You are an ideal lover, constant and true.

Number 108—You have strong recuperative powers and with ordinary care, should have unusually good health. You have strong vitality and the indications are that your first impressions of both people and things will be your best.

Number 104—You are deeply moved through your emotions and affections. The home life is an important feature in your success. You can only be happy where harmony and peace prevail. You are not inclined to mix business with pleasure, but do require refreshing recreation. You are fond of children. You prefer the refined and intellectual forms of pleasure rather than the more strenuous outdoor sports. You are an ideal lover, constant and true.

The Misses McManus Are Being Feted.

Invited are Misses Laura and Sarah McManus, Margaret Merta, Gladys Carr, Anne Bellinger, Barbara Settle, Charlotte Granberry, Mary King Hart, Jacqueline McPherson, Virginia Chamberlin, Marjorie Armstrong, Elizabeth Buchanan, Elizabeth Colley, Frances Alston, Betty Taylor, Martha Hurt, Maudie V. Canfield, Florrie Margaret Guy, Mary Virginia McConnell, Jean Ray, Kitty Pringle and Charlotte Galbraith.

Miss Elizabeth Colley will compliment the Misses McManus on Friday at a luncheon and swimming party at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club. Sharing honors will be Misses Jane Jones of Albany, and Mary Ann Easterlin, of Montezuma, guests of Miss Mary McGaughey.

Dr. and Mrs. Marion Benson entertained at dinner this evening at their Druid Hills residence as a complimentary gesture to the attractive visitors. A group of the younger set of society have been invited to meet the Misses McManus.

Meets Friday.

Mrs. David O'Neal, of 226 Spaymore street in Decatur, will be hostess to the Baron DeKalb Chapter, D. A. R., on Friday at 4 o'clock. A board meeting will be held at 3:45 o'clock, and Mrs. E. B. Carreker, vice regent, will preside.

The program will feature an address by Dr. D. P. McGaughey on "What Constitutes True American Patriotism" and a talk by Mrs. J. M. Webb on "The History of the Flag." The ring offered by the chapter to the high school pupil writing the best historical paper was won by Miss Evelyn Randall, of Decatur Girls' High school.

My Day By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

THE WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, Monday.—I left the peace and quiet of the country yesterday afternoon and took a train for New York. On the train a young woman, who is a Reuters correspondent in China and who was on her way back there, came up to speak to me.

She expressed regret that she had not been able to be at a press conference or have an interview. I told her that I was "off the record," and, in any case, not giving individual interviews. She was very kind and considerate. We got off in New York and dashed for a taxicab with our bags. Panting, the same young woman followed and murmured to me:

"I had almost forgotten how wonderful it is to be back in the United States until I saw you traveling."

Rather a sweet tribute to the individual liberty allowed even the wives of our hard-working public officials!

The midnight train to Washington, a brief chat with my husband this morning and a longer time over the newspapers than I should have spent. In periods such as these, the papers are always interesting from a psychological point of view.

Everyone is writing and doing something spectacular to bring himself before the public eye. Even those whom we have almost forgotten because of their months of more or less peaceful retirement are coming back into view. It reminds me a little of "Bury the Dead," where no one wishes to stay buried.

Off by train to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for the Chi Omega award, given every year to a woman who has proved her ability to be of use to mankind. In this case it is richly deserved by Dr. Alice Hamilton, who holds a professorship in Harvard Medical College, which accepts an outstanding woman as a professor and rejects women students. We get to White Sulphur at 6:45, and are there just for the night.

WATER STORAGE OFFSETS WEIGHT LOSS.

There is no predicting what will happen on a reducing diet. Maybe you'll lose, maybe you won't. You'll even gain! If you're one of those country reducers who gain weight on a low caloric diet, you will be interested in knowing there's a scientific reason. Unreasonable as it may seem, the scales can go up even on a diet deficient in calories. The explanation is that weight change is determined not only by a gain or loss of fat, but by a gain or loss of water retention registers as a gain.

The average reducer, naturally enough, cannot understand how she gains weight when she is hungry, and concludes that her ancestors, age or glands are to blame. As a matter of scientific fact, water storage is usually the cause.

Dr. L. H. Newburgh, of the University of Michigan, has found this true in a series of experiments. In one case, a man of normal weight was placed on a supervised diet of 1,078 calories per day. His daily energy expenditure was 1,688 calories. In spite of this daily deficit of 600 calories, he gained one pound over a five-day period. The diet caused the loss of one pound of body tissue, but water storage was sufficient to show the gain.

On a diet of slightly more than half her caloric requirement, an obese young woman lost no weight for 10 days. In fact, in the first two days, she gained weight. At the end of the 10 days, however, she suddenly began to lose, and in three days lost six pounds. This is typical of the rate of weight loss influenced by water retention.

From Dr. Newburgh's investigations it is seen that failure to lose on a caloric deficit is always temporary. A registered weight loss is only a matter of days, and if the reducer holds out, sooner or later this water exchange is adjusted and the accumulated loss is registered. Anyone can reduce on a continued low caloric diet, so do not let a temporary obstacle like water retention send you back to overeating.

Water drinking has no connection with this physiological process of water storage. On the contrary, it is very important that the reducer drink adequate water to carry off waste tissue. At least eight glasses should be taken daily, between meals.

Salt, however, does seem to be a factor in water storage, and in retarded weight loss a minimum of salt should be used. If you gain weight on a reducing diet, or fail to lose, cut

Now, if ever, in the warm weather, is the time to start cutting your weight to svelte normal. Let Ida Jean Kain help you with her leaflets, "Reducer's Ten Commandments," and "Vegetarian Reducing Menus." Send a large self-addressed, stamped envelope to her in care of The Constitution.

Gulley-Ward.

ELBERTON, Ga., June 23.—A marriage marked by beauty and simplicity was that of Miss Sarah Gulley, daughter of Mrs. Lucy M. Gulley, to Dr. Frank M. Ward, of Decatur, which was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother near Elberton. Rev. Haskell Stratton, a cousin of the bride, performed the ceremony.

A profusion of ferns and gladioli were attractively arranged to form a background for the floor baskets filled with white oleander and gardenias, alternating with these were candelabras holding burning white tapers.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Marshall Penick and Miss Carolyn Alexander, niece of the bride, gave a musical program.

The bride was lovely in white lace over tulle, and her corsage was of sweetheart roses and valley lilies. After the ceremony the couple left for a short wedding trip through the Carolinas.

Those present included the families and close friends of the bride and groom. The out-of-town guests were Rev. and Mrs. Haskell Stratton, of Norcross; Mrs. Marshall Penick, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fools of Atlanta; Mrs. Essie Merritt and Miss Carolyn Adams, of Decatur.

CLOSE PENALTY DOUBLES.

In either making or leaving in a penalty double careful consideration of partner's bridge mentality is vital. If you are considering doubling you must not only appraise partner's previous bids or passes from the viewpoint of dependability, but also must gauge his defending ability, which includes the opening lead if it must be made by him. Fatally close doubles are absurd with a partner who is apt to drop from one to three tricks in the play, and especially against a declarer who, you know, will get every ounce out of the cards.

If the question is whether or not to leave in a double made by your partner, the problem is simple but none the less existent. You may know partner to be a "hair-trigger doubler." In that case, if a bid or a raise that you have made, and on which he probably is depending, was based on anemic values, it is merely self-protection to take the double out. In today's hands, a vulnerable game was conceded by South's failure to follow this safety first policy.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:
North East South West
1 spade Pass 2 diamonds 2 hearts
Double Pass Pass Pass

South was dubious about leaving in the double but, feeling that North would not double a loss-making contract without a "sure thing," decided to "take a chance." He soon regretted it.

North opened the diamond five and South made the good play of failing to put up his ace, figuring that the lead probably was form a doubler rather than a singleton. Declarer won the trick with the king and immediately led to the spade king. North hopped up with the ace and then threw away the one chance of defeating the contract by leading his remaining diamond. South had to take the ace this time, and now it did not matter what he returned. He chose the natural lead of a club, North of clubs. Declarer won and led another heart. North took his ace, but never could make the ten spot of trumps, since declarer had merely lost the next spade lead and lay down the heart king. Result: Two hearts doubled, made for game and rubber.

South should have bid three diamonds (which would have gone down a trick) rather than the double. In this case, the double was a mistake. The two-heart contract should have been defeated one trick. There was no point whatever to North's second diamond lead while the J-8 trumps remained in dummy. He had merely to exit with a club and declarer would have been helpless. If declarer led a diamond South would win and return a trump, North should cash his queen and ace and exit again. South eventually would have to get another diamond lead. If declarer led up to the heart jack instead of leading diamonds North should win with the queen, lay down the ace, and then play his deuce of diamonds for a third-round diamond ruff.

Again I say don't leave in close doubles except when the defense will be perfect.

Today's Question.
Question: Both sides vulnerable, partner bid one spade, next hand passed. I held:

Spades—none
Hearts—K 6 5 3 2
Diamonds—9 7 4 3
Clubs—5 4 2
What was my correct response?

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cohen were married at an impressive June ceremony at the bride's home on Briarcliff road. The bride is the former Miss Evelyn Greenblatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Greenblatt, and Mr. Cohen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Cohen, of Ashburn, Ga. Photo by McCrary.

Miss Sarah Brown Weds Mr. Burton.

LAVONIA, Ga., June 23.—The Methodist church of Lavonia formed a beautiful setting Saturday afternoon for the marriage of Miss Sarah Brown, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Brown, and Ben W. Burton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Burton, of Lavonia. Dr. George L. King, of West Point, officiated at 5:30 o'clock in the presence of relatives and friends of the young couple. Prior to and during the ceremony a musical program was rendered by Miss Celeste Terrell, of Toocoo, Mrs. E. C. Mauldin, of Ellaville, Ga., sang "Sweetest Story Ever Told."

Ligon Maret, Ross Rogers, Jimmie Sewell and Willard Brown acted as groomsmen and Mrs. Robert French, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Miss Janice Ruth Wilder, Miss Edna Abercrombie, Mrs. Joe Mobley and Miss Mary Jim Burton were the bridesmaids. Miss Sara Burton and Miss Shirley lighted the candles. Little Frances Dixon and Roslyn Rogers were flower girls.

Entering with her father, Dr. J. R. Brown, by whom she was given in marriage, the bride was met at the altar by the groom and H. H. Bonner, best man. The bride's bouquet was further enhanced by her handsome wedding gown, a very satia fashioned along princess lines, floor length, and extending into a long train. The light sleeves ended in a point over her hand. The veil of illusion tulle was held to her hair with a coronet of pearls, and orange blossoms extended to the end of her long train. She carried a bridal bouquet of calla lilies tied with wide satin ribbon.

After the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Brown entertained at a reception at their home on West avenue. Mrs. Pope Brown, of Atlanta, sister-in-law of the bride, kept the bride's book.

Mr. Burton and his bride left on the wedding trip to North Carolina. The bride traveled in a smart two-piece navy blue ensemble with hat to match. She wore a shoulder corsage of lilies and carried a very long veil.

The couple will be located in Deatur, Ala., where Mr. Burton holds a position with the TVA.

Out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. Stewart Brown, Sara Frances and Stewart Jr., of Royston; Dr. and Mrs. T. R. Gaines, Miss Lucile Gaines, of Anderson, S. C.; Dr. J. H. Terrell, Miss Mary Neal Little, of Greenville; Mrs. H. H. Crittendon, Gloria and Barbara Crittendon, of Commerce; Miss Edna Abercrombie, of Athens; Miss Elizabeth Dickerson, of McDonough; Mrs. Reed Burton and Miss Dorris Burton, of Canon; Dr. and Mrs. George L. King, of West Point; Robert Ridgway, of Madison, Ga.

Bridal Couple Feted.
Miss Grace Kell and Wesley Jacobs, whose marriage will be an event of Saturday, were honored on Monday evening when Miss Ina Butler was hostess at a party at her home. The guests included members of the Cliff C. Wing Union of the Oakhurst Baptist church. The honor guests were presented with a beautiful gift.

Miss Kell and Mr. Jacobs were honored recently when Mrs. M. C. Kiser and Mrs. Harold Stroud, entertained at the home of Mrs. Kiser on Peachtree road. The house was beautifully decorated with a green and white color motif and a miniature wedding scene was arranged on the buffet.

Guests were Miss Kell, Mr. Jacobs, Mrs. and Mrs. Ralph Wager, Mr. and Mrs. William Malkey, Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Stroud and Mr. and Mrs. Kiser.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.
Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence should be sent to Miss Chatfield, care of The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: It makes me laugh to think of the Spinster Club that wrote you giving ten requirements for good husbands. If they wait for their ideals to come along they will have to resign themselves to permanent spinsterhood for a man that has all they are looking for seldom marries. If he can entertain himself he doesn't need a wife for this. If he has plenty of money he can hire servants to look after his house and hire nurses to attend him when he is sick. In business he can travel much faster alone and on vacations he could stay twice as long because of single expense. Certainly vacations would be much more thrilling because of the possibility of meeting new girls. Freedom is a very good and one of the most delightful things about it is the unmarried man has no wife's family to be pleasant to, or friends either. He does not have to go out with the same woman night because there are always plenty of girls who feel about marriage as he does. Why should he take on a boarder who is going to tell him that to do and what not to do and confine his entertainment to reading and sports with men only? It would be fine if we let the girls take us in, run things and live happily ever after. The spinsters would have been much more interesting if they had discussed why a man of their ideals should ever want to marry.

Answer: Why so cynical, young man? Either you have never been in love, or you have loved and lost to a spinster who believes in love's dream and still expects to have a prince charming ride up on a charger to live happily with her ever after. The spinsters who wrote about their ideal husbands admitted that they didn't expect to find him; and they intimated that they expected to compromise, but they were having a gay time waiting for their ideal husband, hoping of course that the said boy friends would read their fairy tales and be inspired to hitch to a star.

Suppose the opulent bachelor does lead a merry and carefree life, free to go about when and where he chooses, stay as long as he likes, (all of which he certainly does); suppose he can have plenty of girl friends, take a different one out to the church street, the occasion celebrating the hostess's birthday. Guests were Miss Suzanne Howell, Dousha Brown, Elzine Hutcheson, Sara Pearl Latimer, Sara Knott, Hazel Ward, Jane Hawkins, Marie Macdon, Cordelia Brumby, Connie Schilling, Jessie Lee Lynn and Grace George Wing.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Page complimented Atlanta friends with a barbecue Saturday at the Marietta Golf Club. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Preiss, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Cannon, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Murr, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Keown, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pruitt, Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Spence and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Mrs. Carolyn Seivers Is Luncheon Hostess

Mrs. Carolyn Seivers, president of the Atlanta Pilot Club, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Ansley hotel cave honoring Miss Mabel Clair Speth, of Savannah, immediate past president of Pilot International, and three other members of the Savannah Pilot Club, Misses Margaret Brooks, Dorothy Gordon and Annie Lou Friedman, who are in Atlanta en route home from the international convention in Birmingham.

Miss Speth was elected to the newly created position of executive secretary of Pilot International and will devote her entire time during the coming year to extension work. She plans to carry on extension work in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Arkansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, Missouri, Texas, New Mexico and California, and hopes to contact at least 30 prospective clubs, in addition to forming about 10 clubs on which preliminary work has been done during the past year.

The members of the Atlanta club present were Misses Elsie Layton, Tommie Parrish, Julia Mashburn, Amy Mitchell, Carey Singleton, Esma Courney, Julia Parker, Betty Carson and Mesdames Fay Barrett, Jean Berkeley, Belle Bond, Grace Turner, Lucie Brantley, Ethel Cooper and Pauline Branyon.

Miss Vaughn Weds Ansel B. Cook.

Of interest throughout the state is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Vaughan, of Orlando, Fla., of the marriage of their sister, Miss Caroline Vaughan, to Ansel B. Cook, of Atlanta, formerly of LaGrange and Millington.

The marriage took place on Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bieger on Gordon street in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends. The ceremony was read by Rev. Ryland Knight, pastor of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church.

The bride was lovely in a ciel-blue ensemble, with accessories to match. Her flowers were a corsage of pink roses and valley lilies. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Vaughan, and sister of Miss Nellie Vaughan, of Carrollton, and came to Atlanta some six years ago to accept a position with the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company. By her charming and gracious manner, and lovely personality she has made a wide circle of friends in Atlanta.

The groom is the son of the late T. F. Cook and Mrs. Rosa Young Cook. He is well known throughout the south, and holds a responsible position with the Oglethorpe Mills.

After a wedding trip to Boston and other points of interest in the east Mr. and Mrs. Cook will reside here.

Presto Group.

Presto group of the Orpheus Music Club meets with Anna Mae Farmer Nimick, counsellor of the club, Thursday afternoon, with Blanche Krugman, chairman, presiding. Members include Misses Blanche Krugman, Annette Lefkoff, Pauline Newman, Sylvia Pissick, Lillian Rosenberg and Edith Shattar.

Diz Again Rescues Cardinals; White Sox Blast Yankees, 13-4

CUBS SNAP BEES' WINNING STREAK AT THREE GAMES

Giants Lick Pirates; Bill Hallahan in His First Cincy Victory.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(UP)—St. Louis Cardinals held on grimly to their second National League lead today by beating the Philadelphia Phillies, 3 to 2.

A two-run rally in the eighth inning defeated the Phils. The Cardinals' great "money player," Pepper Martin, smacked a double with the chips down that drove Chick Fullin and Tony Moore home with the winning runs. For the second consecutive day, Manager Frankie Frisch had to call on Dizzy Dean to stem a Philadelphia uprising. The lanky right-hander saved the game for Ed Heusser today although the Cards were out 9 to 5. Bowman, the losing pitcher, gave up only four innings in the eight innings he hurled.

Chicago's Cubs stayed a game and a half behind the Cards by licking the Boston Bees, 8 to 6, to even the series at one game each. A big five-run seventh inning brought the Cubs from behind to give the victory to Charley Root, who was removed for a pinch-hitter during the spurge. Frankie Demaree's four-base blow with two men on—his eighth of the year—climaxed the rally.

The New York Giants climbed to within a half game of the third-place Pittsburgh Pirates by piling the Bees, 3 to 2, to make it two straight.

Burgess Whitehead's home run in the fifth proved to be the winning run. Manager Terry had homered previously and the Giants counted another run off Mancuso's threat and Jackson's single. The Pirates threatened to knot the count in the eighth and drove Gumbert from the box, but Al Smith cut the rally short at two runs.

Wild Bill Hallahan had a hot day against Brooklyn, limiting the Dodgers to five hits and the Cincinnati Reds score a 3-to-0 decision. It was the first time Hallahan had gone the distance this season and his first victory for the Reds since being purchased from the Cards. Kiki Cuyler, with three singles, led the Reds' 12-hit attack.

Max Schmeling Sails for Home Aboard Zeppelin

NEW YORK, June 13.—(UP)—With the acclaim of the American public still ringing in his ears, Max Schmeling was to sail for home tonight aboard the zeppelin Hindenburg.

Before the huge sausage-shaped craft was cut loose from her mooring mast at Lakehurst, N. J., the man who thrilled the fight world with his sensational victory over Joe Louis made two promises to Promoter Mike Jacobs, who headed the Auf Wiedersehen delegation.

He'll be back in August to fight Henry Heine, the heavyweight title and, if he wins, he'll return again next June to defend it.

That took a load off the mind of Mr. Jacobs, who was disturbed by gossip that if Herr Max became the first man in history to regain the championship, he'd retire to his Basarow estate and bury it.

Billy Wilson Cards Ace at Sea Island

SEA ISLAND, Ga., June 23.—Billy Wilson, of Atlanta, professional at the Bobby Jones course, joined the "Hole-in-One" Club at the Sea Island Golf Club by making the difficult fifth hole in one shot. In the past four years there have been only two holes-in-one recorded at the Sea Island course. One was made in 1935 by Mrs. George A. Thorne, of New York, who sunk her first shot on the seventh, and the other was made the previous year by Hugh Hallall, of Dallas, Texas, former holder of the United States senior championship, who made the fifth in one.

DIZ DEAN OFFERS BAIT BUCKS CONVENTION; SAYS MARTIN WILL PITCH TO GET PHIL FANS OUT

By Jack Troy.

It was rather startling to hear the voice of Dizzy Dean coming in over the air from the national democratic convention at Philadelphia yesterday.

But leave it to Dizzy. No small item like a national democratic convention was going to be allowed to keep the fans away from the ball park with the "Gas House Gang" in town.

"Everybody should come out today, and see Pepper Martin pitch," the voice of Dizzy declared. "I don't mind saying that the other pitchers are pretty terrific. Pepper Martin is going to pitch and after today he will rank as the No. 2 pitcher on the Cardinals' staff."

At this juncture the announcer interjected that Dizzy had asked him who the No. 1 pitcher was.

"Nobody but an old Diz," said the voice of Dizzy Dean.

It is very likely that no few fans—even as hard to convince as are Philadelphia rooters—turned out on the strength of Dizzy's declaration that Pepper Martin was going to take the mound.

Diz offered them the lure. He showed the instincts of the true showman. And no one could blame Diz if Manager Frankie Frisch decided he was still running the club and named Heusser as the pitcher.

They're a colorful lot, the Gas House Gang. Diz even had Pepper Martin on the air telling the fans that he was going to pitch the Cards to victory or list in the attempt.

Dizzy signed off by telling the listeners that "Roosevelt has done a lot for me. And he's going to keep us on the road to prosperity for four more years."

When Dizzy Dean was here with the Cards in the spring he aired his views over the radio. He was going great until he got around to the subject of Joe Engel, Chattanooga subject, with whom he has quite a feud. "That Engel is no good," shouted the voice of Dizzy Dean. "And I'll tell that to everybody anytime I get the chance. You can't win ball games with them. You can't win ball games with them. You can't win ball games with them. You've got to have ball players."

Leonard Replaces Bayne on Roster.

Billy Bayne was given his unconditional release yesterday to make room on the active list for Emil Leonard, new right-hander pitcher acquired from Brooklyn.

Bayne was given plenty of opportunity to make the grade with the Crakers. With a break or two, he might have got going. But the fact remains that Billy Bayne is a "hard-luck" pitcher.

He pitched a 10-inning tie at Nashville. It was his best performance since he was released. He won a great that afternoon. He won in a relief role Sunday at Little Rock. It was the only game in which he had any real hitting behind him. Except in 1930, when he won 21 games in the Southern League. Bayne later has had the misfortune to pitch good ball and seldom get anything behind him. It's one of the strange and inexplicable breaks.

Leonard, who has a fine knuckle ball is expected to prove a winner with the Crakers. If he makes good as a regular starter, the Crakers are as good as "in."

Buford Is Winner Over Fairfax, 8-2

BUFORD, Ga., June 23.—Buford's Shoemakers won their 40th game of the season with a 8-to-2 decision over Fairfax Mills here this afternoon. The second game of a scheduled double-header was called off because of wet grounds.

Cleo Jeter limited the visitors to eight hits and kept them well scattered. He gave up two runs, but let up after his mates had piled up a six-run lead in five innings.

McSwain and Baxter divided hitting honors for Buford.

Buford will journey to Atlanta Wednesday to play Dixieland. Exposition Cotton Mills, from Atlanta, will play here Thursday and Dixieland will play a return game here Friday afternoon.

SOFTBALL ATTENDANCE.

MACON, Ga., June 23.—(AP)—Attendance at a series of 20 night softball games here has been 16,000.

One of three feature races which will be run on an eight-event card of A. A. A. auto races at Lakewood on July 4 will be a race for southern-owned cars driven by southern drivers.

Last year a handicap Dixie race was added to a program when the Barfield trophy, indicating the southern title, was won by Red Redmond. This year the A. A. A. has designated a southeastern states championship for 13 states, in which the driver of highest ranking is awarded the official title.

The July 4 race therefore will be an unofficial southern title race for southern drivers. In the A. A. A. season championship, a driver no matter where he is a resident, may win. Chet Gardner was leader in 1934 in the south and Ken Fowler in 1935.

CHICAGO SCORES NINE IN SIXTH; BOSTON TINNER

Red Sox Gain Full Game. Athletics Outscore Cleveland, 8-6.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The leading Yankees were drubbed today, 13 to 4, by the Chicago White Sox who put on a tremendous nine-run batting clinic in the sixth inning. The Sox limited the Yanks to nine hits, to win his eighth game of the year.

Walt Brown was the victim of Chicago's 13-hit assault, being shelled from the mound in favor of Johnny Broaca in the sixth.

The loss cut a full game from the Yankees' lead as the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 6, to even the series at one game each. Lefty Grove scored his 10th win, dramatically striking out Chicago's George Slaughter with the tying run on third base in the ninth. Al Simmons accounted for five Tigers with two homers and a single. Manager Ronin and Jimmy Fox also hit for the circuit, making 19 this year for Fox. Sorrell, who replaced Auker on the mound for Detroit in the sixth, allowed the winning run to come across in the eighth and was charged with the loss. Both teams scored 11 hits.

The Philadelphia Athletics scored their second straight win over the Cleveland Indians, 8 to 6, with the help of two unearned runs, and Fink's superb relief pitching in the last frame, and the Indians then proceeded to fill the bags. Rhodes was yanked when he couldn't locate the plate and threw a wild pitch. The Athletics scored a 4-2 lead in the eighth and ended the game. Moses homered for the A's.

The St. Louis Browns machine fell all night long. The Washington Senators counted a 10-to-5 victory. The Browns committed six fielding errors, which the Senators coupled with a 10-0 lead in the fifth. The Browns also gave up 12 sacrifices to the Browns but kept them scattered.

He'll have to be getting back to the docks and toughen up a bit. He is getting no younger every day. He is not nearly so well conditioned as the Teuton. Max has just come through a long training siege, but then he never has had a tendency to acquire extra weight, or that softness which comes to most men after a period of idleness.

If the Irishman is in condition in September (there is no need worrying about Schmeling; he is a 30-round fighter) it will be a close, vicious fight, and not more than a 7-5 edge for either warrior in pre-fight betting, is the outlook from here.

Both Braddock and Schmeling are fearless—game to the core. Theirs is dauntless courage, the kind that knows no obstacles. They both came through magnificently against men who were figured to make them human punching bags. Back of their efforts are pride of country, family, the will to win. They cannot bear defeat.

Schmeling is primarily a slugger. His right hand is his unsecretive plan of victory.

ONCE MAY BE ENOUGH.

Braddock is not a knockout artist, but a slashing hitter with either hand. And a very fine boxer. Jim knows too many tricks of the game to be hit repeatedly by the right hand that blasted Louis. But then there is always the chance that the Teuton will find his target. Once may be enough. Braddock's chances seem to lie in his ability to circle and jab with his fine left hand and cross with his underrated right. His hopes for victory via a knockout are slim. The German can take it. And then take it some more. A colored boy from Old Alabama will verify that.

Promoters said a Louis defeat would make a Schmeling-Braddock fight a washout—so far as a gate attraction was concerned. Maybe not. Both men are tremendously popular—Braddock, because he came up from the breadline and polished off a wise-cracking Baer, and always has carried himself befitting a champion—Schmeling, because he refused to accept the experts' word for it that he was doomed, abruptly hushing the cry for a "white hope."

More sentiment than has surrounded a heavyweight fight in a great many years seems headed the way of the September struggle. The entire fight world is intensely interested. And the boys who lay their money on the line will be a little harder to convince this time that a real fight, and not a one-sided glove-tugging party, is not in the offing.

Steinborn and Roche Will Clash Tonight

Milo Steinborn will use his pet bulldog, the bear hug, in an effort to subdue Dorve Roche, former Scranton coal miner, in the feature wrestling event tonight at the ball park.

Steinborn has been absent from the local wrestling wars for something like 14 months. During that time he has been working regularly and winning the same way.

Promoter Frank Speer has arranged a most attractive card. The Steinborn-Roche tussle ranks as a natural.

Then, too, the semi-windup which

ABEL TO REFEREE BOUTS THURSDAY

Jake Abel, well-known Atlanta referee and former fighter, has been selected by Matchmaker Doc Lanford to handle the main event and the semi-windup of the 32-round boxing card Thursday night at the ball park.

Abel, who has handled many of the big fights here in the past, has consented to referee these bouts Thursday night at the Georgia State Stadium, which will feature Joe Lipine, Ty Ty (Ga.) heavyweight, and Bob Hoover, of Charlotte, in the main event.

The semi-windup brings together "Bunker" Hill, the Fort Benning soldier who recently returned from a successful tour in the east, and Bob Allison, middleweight champion of the Carolinas. In the prelims Lefty Allen, of Macon, vs. Harold Glymph, in a six-round bout and Tiny Gason vs. Kid Murphy in a four-rounder. Another four-rounder will start the show at 8:30 o'clock.

Ladies will be admitted free with a paid escort. Tickets are on sale at Taylor's Soda Co.

H. Kennedy Joins Hole-in-One Club

H. Kennedy was admitted to Atlanta's hole-in-one club during the week-end. He sank a tee shot on the No. 2 hole at Arrowhead, a few miles south of Hapeville. The hole is 235 yards from the tee.

R. L. Payne and W. E. Orr were just leaving the green and saw the ball roll into the cup as Kennedy yelled (fore) from the tee.

Avondale Offers Three Mat Bouts

Three star matches are announced for the weekly wrestling show at the Avondale arena Thursday night. Topping the program will be Count Karl Von Hoffman and Wild Bill Collins; Sammy Miller and Billy Raburn will tie up in the semi-final.

Sun Almond meets the Texas flash, George Wagner in the other one-hour match.

All of the matmen are crowd pleasers and the attendance should be large.

Ulnaga, Hottel 1 in 1 2 3, Wiegman 1 in 1 2 3, 12 in 4 5 6, Rhodes none in none. Pink none in 1 2; wild pitches, Ross 2; winning pitcher, Ross; losing pitcher, Blawie; umpire, Johnston; scorers, Summers and Owens. Time of game, 2:23.

HENRY COTTON HAS RECORD 68 IN BRITISH OPEN

Gadd Cards 68 at Wallasey; Sarazen Turns in 71.

By Gayle Talbot.

HOYLAKE, England, June 23.—(AP)—Thomas Henry Cotton, it appeared tonight, once more is the man to beat for the British open golf championship.

The tall 29-year-old British pro of a Brussels club, winner of the title in 1934, fired his second record-breaking round in as many days as the bulky field of 286, including seven Americans headed by Gene Sarazen, completed the first 18 holes of the 36-hole qualifying round today.

Playing the gruelling, back-breaking Hoylake layout, now stretching 7,087 yards, Cotton, with all his shots under full control, set up a new competitive record of 68 for the lengthened course. Yesterday he had lowered the record for the neighboring Wallasey links to 67 only to have this spectacular performance washed from the score board by an electrical storm that forced the tournament committee to cancel all scores and order a new start.

Sarazen, who had carded a net 71, three under par, at Hoylake earlier in the day, trailed along with the gallery of 3,000 who stormed the course to catch a glimpse of the British star as he played the finishing holes.

Sarazen's 71 left him in an excellent position for the final 18 holes of the qualifying round tomorrow but none of the other Americans figured among the leaders and several of them were on the border-line.

Ted Turner, of Pine Valley, N. J., played steadily to return a 74 at Wallasey where Joe Egan, the trick-shot Texan, took a 75, and T. Dennis Boardman, of South Hamilton, Mass., 79. At Hoylake, Willie Grogan, of San Francisco, used up 77 strokes and Ernie Ball, of Mobile, Ala., 80. The seventh American entrant, Frank Ball, of Tannersville, N. Y., was all over the course at Hoylake and wound up with an 87 that means almost certain elimination.

Boardman was not worried by his position. He will sail for home Friday night and thus will not play the final 36 holes of the championship proper ever should he qualify for them.

Tomorrow the field will reverse courses for the second qualifying round. All those who played Hoylake today will play Wallasey tomorrow, and vice versa.

Southern Appoints Two New Umpires

MTMPHIS, Tenn., June 23.—(UP)—President John D. Martin tonight announced appointment of two new umpires for the Southern League staff.

Reeder, from the South Atlantic league, and Grant from the Florida State league will bring their first game with Umpire Buck Campbell at New Orleans tomorrow.

Reeder replaced Umpire H. B. Warner, who was dismissed last week, and Grant made the ninth man on the staff.

Continuing to treat Williams roughly, the tribe gathered in a couple more in the sixth. Jack Calvey walked and when Jimmy Powell attempted to leave, he was thrown to the ground. Williams, who had been fourth by scoring 33-12 points, was fourth again by making Macdonald's fourth basket. The match was won by the team sponsored by the Jewish Educational Alliance Sunday. The Six Point Club, led by Manheim, who took three firsts, won the junior division with 29 points.

ROOSEVELT LISTENS TO CONVENTION ON AIR

President Holds 2-Hour Conference With Friend Who Will Nominate Him.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—The proceedings of the democratic national convention echoed in the White House today as President Roosevelt paused in his work schedule to listen in on the broadcast.

After listening to National Chairman James A. Farley's speech, the chief executive held a two-hour conference with his old friend and New York neighbor, Judge John E. Mack, who, as he did in 1932, will place Mr. Roosevelt's name in nomination at Philadelphia.

Prior to his talk with Mack, Mr. Roosevelt began writing his speech of acceptance which he will deliver in person to the convention next Saturday night.

During the day he also held another series of political conferences, studied the drought situation in the southeast and acted on 38 bills, nine of which he vetoed. Among the bills signed was the $500,000,000 tax bill.

In today's conferences, he went over the political situation with Speaker Bankhead, Chairman McReynolds, democrat, Tennessee, of the house foreign affairs committee; Hugh R. Wilson, the American minister at Geneva; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Senator Hayden, of Arizona.

The speaker, on leaving the White

House, said he expected to take an active part in the fall campaign. At a press conference late in the day, Mr. Roosevelt expressed interest in co-operative developments abroad and announced the government was sending three men to Europe to study these projects.

WHISKY IS HIDDEN BY POTTED PLANTS

Detectives Seize 19 Gallons of Corn; Raids Yield $500 in Fines.

Potted plants surrounding a trap door behind a chimney in a house at 326 Martin street was reminiscent of a funeral, but detectives found the only "corpse" was 19 gallons of corn whisky at about 11 o'clock last night.

Walter Johnson, 35, negro, found in the house in which the raid was made by Detectives R. R. Davis, J. A. Bailey and G. G. Caldwell, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

An hour before this raid, the same detectives arrested a man listed as Tom King, 26, of 682 Spring street, at Pine and Peachtree streets, on a similar charge when 80 pints and 10 quarts of assorted bonded whiskies were allegedly found in his car. He was later released under $200 bond.

A car containing 197 gallons of corn whisky was found by Motorcycle Patrolmen E. H. Johnson and G. H. Williams following a chase which began on DeKalb avenue, near Moreland avenue, and which ended when the driver ran the car to the sidewalk in making a turn from DeKalb avenue into Auburn avenue. He leaped from the machine and fled on foot.

Arrests by vice squad members over the week-end have netted $500 in fines following arrangements in recorder's court, it was revealed last night. Several of those arrested for lottery and whisky violations were bound over to higher courts, and two sentences of 29 days in jail were imposed.

Governor Talmadge today reset an executive clemency hearing for Eli Melton, convicted in Muscogee county and sentenced to death, for July 9. The Governor rescheduled the hearing at the request of George P. Munro, Melton's attorney. Melton was ripe to get by with anything, so they just did away with this primary on September 9 and nominated Judge Blanton Forston democratic candidate for governor.

Talmadge has announced he will name his slate of officers, including the candidate he will support for governor at a political barbecue July 4. The Welton movement, sponsored by the former chancellor of the University System of Georgia, nominated Judge Forston for governor at Macon June 18.

The Governor was caustic in his comments on the Welton platform calling the delegates "a very brilliant bunch of Georgia statesmen."

Max L. McRae, member of the State Highway Board said plans were being made to feed 50,000 people at McRae, July 4, when Governor Talmadge opens his campaign.

Circulars bearing the Governor's picture and a highway map showing routes to McRae have been distributed all over Georgia during the last week. McRae will entertain employees of the highway department and other friends at McRae the night before the barbecue.

NEW REVENUE BILL SIGNED BY ROOSEVELT
WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—The $800,000,000 tax bill which last week was holding up adjournment of congress became law today. It was signed by President Roosevelt.

In addition to the tax bill, the President signed 28 other measures, including the $114,000,000 Interior Department appropriation bill, and cleared his desk of major legislation passed by the congress which adjourned early Sunday morning.

S. G. MDANIEL DIES AT HOME IN ATHENS
ATHENS, Ga., June 23.—Stobo Garlington McDaniel, 60, for 30 years an employee of the Georgia Power Company, died at his home here this morning after an illness of three years.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow from Bernstein's chapel. Interment will be at Bowersville, where he was born. Dr. S. J. Cartledge, pastor Central Presbyterian church, Athens, will officiate.

He was a member of Central Presbyterian church.

CHICAGO, June 23.—(AP)—Headless of the pleas of a janitor who pursued him a fire escape, Thomas Baxter, 56, climbed to the roof of a 10-story hotel and plunged to his death.

TALMADGE SATIRE AIMED AT FORTSON

Georgia 'Brain Trusters' Manipulated Welton's Session, Says Governor.

Governor Talmadge attacked the Philip Welton "draft a governor" movement and its candidate, Judge Blanton Forston, of Athens, yesterday saying "the people of Georgia will have more to say about this nomination on September 9."

"There has always been a small minority of brain trusters in the state of Georgia who thought they could elect all of our statehouse officers," the Governor wrote in the Statesman, his weekly newspaper.

"This small minority of brain trusters have never been bold enough to come out on the surface with it before, but they thought the time was ripe to get by with anything, so they just did away with this primary on September 9 and nominated Judge Blanton Forston democratic candidate for governor."

Talmadge has announced he will name his slate of officers, including the candidate he will support for governor at a political barbecue July 4. The Welton movement, sponsored by the former chancellor of the University System of Georgia, nominated Judge Forston for governor at Macon June 18.

The Governor was caustic in his comments on the Welton platform calling the delegates "a very brilliant bunch of Georgia statesmen."

UNDER CONTRACT

Atlanta Negro With Major Bowes for Five Years.

Annie Belle Hunnicutt, 25-year-old Atlanta negro spiritual singer who for the last month has been making a short film feature in the Joe Palooka series, in New York city, returned here yesterday to await word from Major Bowes regarding another motion picture or a lead role in one of the maestro's "all-colored" vaudeville units.

Though she expects her visit to be brief, the singer hopes to answer at least a few of the thousands of congratulatory letters which poured in following her appearance over Major Bowes' national amateur program May 24. For her radio audition, Annie Belle sang "Little David Play On Your Harp."

She was the servant of Mrs. Lillian N. Crawford, of 1156 Ponce de Leon avenue, who took her to New York city for an audition after recognizing the depth and richness of the singer's contralto voice. During the last few years, many Atlantans have heard Annie Belle sing.

She is now under a five-year contract to Major Bowes to appear in his all-colored vaudeville units or to make short film features, according to Mrs. Crawford. The vaudeville units are scheduled to leave New York city August 15, but Annie Belle expects to be called shortly for another movie or a radio appearance. She said yesterday she "know'd she would make good over de radio, for she depended on de Lawd."

DEMOCRATS EXPECTED TO ABROGATE 2-3 RULE

New Mexico, Tennessee, Virginia, Texas and Alabama Oppose Change.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—(AP)—Democrats tonight were apparently of a mind to wrap crepe around their ancient two-thirds rule but were a little slow about deciding just who would do the deed.

Senator Clark, of Missouri, who will head the rules committee, said a meeting to draft the rules under which the convention will operate would not be held until tomorrow afternoon because many of the state delegations had not yet chosen their members for the committee.

For over a hundred years now, the rules brought to the convention by its rules committee have required that a candidate must have the vote of two-thirds of the delegates.

While the plans for the meeting were being set by Clark, chairman Farley, of the democratic national committee, called "asinine" a printed report that the purpose back of the change in convention rules was a desire to have President Roosevelt seek a third term nomination in 1940.

Both Clark and Farley said they were confident that the rule would be erased with little more than a gesture of opposition from some of the southern delegations.

State caucuses today found New Mexico, Tennessee, Virginia, Texas and Alabama instructing their members of the rules committee to vote against changing the rule.

The North Carolina delegation surprised both friends and enemies of the two-thirds rule by voting to favor its abrogation.

Iowa delegates refused to approve a motion that the delegation vote for its continuance.

Utah and Maryland voted to end the rule.

G.O.P. WOULD WELCOME AID OF ALFRED SMITH

NEW YORK, June 23.—(AP)—John D. M. Hamilton, republican candidate for president, but the former New York governor continued his silence today he would be "dickled to death" if Alfred E. Smith stomped for Governor Alf M. Landon, republican nominee for president, but the former New York governor continued his silence.

Smith and four other democrats, including former Senator Joseph Ely, last Sunday called on the democratic convention delegates to put aside President Roosevelt.

"Mr. Smith has nothing to add to last Sunday's statement," his office said today.

In Massachusetts Ely voiced a qualified willingness to speak for Landon.
